Selby Foremen Hold Interesting Meeting

An interesting session of the Selby Superintendents and Foremen's Association was held Monday evening in the factory restaurant room. During the luncheon a concert was given by the Buckeye Serenaders, five high school students, assisted by two musicians from the factory. The high school musicians were Cecil Rice, saxophone; Gordon White, pianist; Robert Barber, cornet; Gerald Van Scoy, trombone; and Herbert Rice, drums. The two players from the factory were Paul Blhman, saxophone, and Clyde Grady, banjo.

Homer Selby took charge of the program for the evening and gave a general talk on the purchasing of supplies. He was followed by James Rice, who gave a talk on how supplies are ordered, inventories kept, and how the purchasing department is conducted. Dr. C. L. Ferguson also made a talk on "How Factory Executives Can Cooperate With the Medical Department."

Three new members were received last night. They are Dr. Alice Lyle, Hiram Gordon and Charles Baker.

Brands Charges As "Misleading"

WASHINGTON, Mar. 12—Charges of profiteering placed against West Virginia coal producers by the United Mine Workers Union were asserted to be "characteristically misleading" in a statement issued today by Walter H. Cunningham, West Virginia coal operator and official of operators associations.

The Union, through Ellis Searles, now representing it before the commission, Mr. Cunningham asserted, was "engaged in belaboring the real issue, by defending the five months strike which placed an enormous burden on the American consumer" while attacking "that part of the industry that functioned when the United Mine Workers were trying to close every mine in the United States."

"His misleading statements can no longer deceive the public or the coal commission," Mr. Cunningham said. "Inadequate transportation, coupled with the quickening of demand for coal of West Virginia character and quality has caused an increase in the spot price, which, as any well posted consumer knows, is generally well above the contract price of 1922."

Married Here

Mrs. Ethel Scott McCall, well known local girl, and Mr. Edwin Staepel of Steubenville, Ohio, were married Saturday in Portsmouth, local friends and relatives announced.

Mrs. McCall has been making her home with Mrs. Kelley at the Ironton hotel for the past three months. The newlyweds will reside at Portsmouth for about three weeks and then go to Pittsburgh to make their future home.—Irontonian.

SOUTH PORTSMOUTH SCHOOL TRAGEDY MAY CLAIM SECOND VICTIM; LEWIS BOY IN SERIOUS CONDITION

At South Portsmouth, it was stated Tuesday that Donald Boggs, son of Mr. and Mrs. Roy Boggs, and Christie Anderson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Anderson, who were seriously injured when pinned beneath the roof of the grade and high school building when it was unroofed by the high wind, were much better and would recover.

The Boggs child is a cousin of Dennis Boggs, aged 10, who was instantly killed when the chimney of the building toppled over on him, his skull being crushed.

James Lewis, ten-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Lewis, who also suffered a fractured skull when pinned under the roof, was no better today and probably will be brought to a local hospital. He is conscious only at times, and in addition to a fractured skull he suffered internal injuries. He was one of the last of the 15 school children pinned beneath the roof to be released.

Other children who were injured were reported much better Tuesday. Funeral services for Dennis Boggs were held today and interment took place near Quincy, Ky. Mrs. Boggs is in a serious condition from shock and for this reason it was deemed advisable to bury her son today. Her physician says her condition is dangerous as she has been in poor health for sometime and the shock of her son being killed was a severe blow to her.

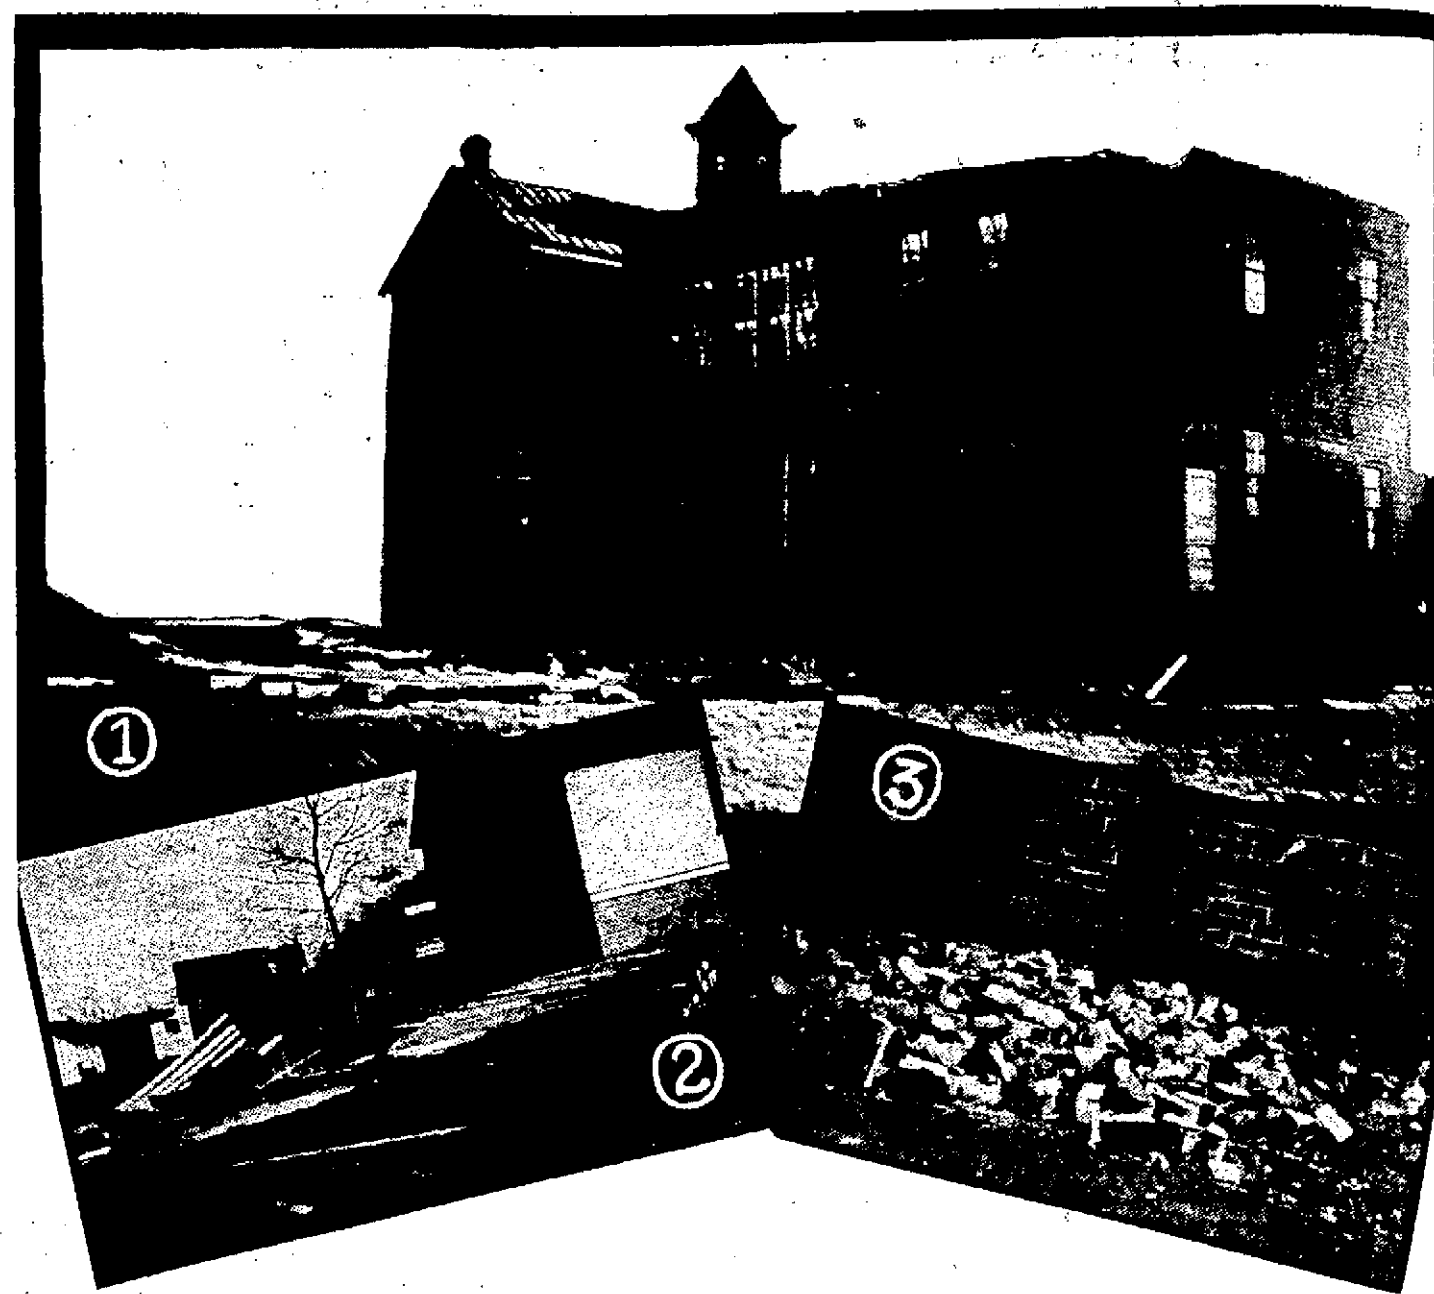

Besides his parents, Dennis Boggs is survived by the following sisters and brothers: Myrtle, 15, Mason, 13; Clarence, 6; Millard, 4; Laura Mae, 3, and Charles only six months old. Mr. Boggs is employed by the Portsmouth Sand and Gravel company and he was not able to reach his home until after dinner Monday, owing to the ferryboat being unable to negotiate her regular trips, due to the high wind.

Hundreds of people visited the scene of the accident Monday and were amazed at the manner in which the heavy roof was lifted up and carried over into the school yard, where it fell on the children while at play.

It was the consensus of opinion among the parents of the children attending the school that they would not be permitted to return until the building had been made storm proof.

Decrees Of Dame Fashion Are Revealed At Kline's Style Show At Columbia Theatre

Eight models showed sport wear, street costumes, afternoon wear, dinner frocks, evening gowns, shoes and accessories at Kline's Style Show at the Columbia Theatre last night, given in conjunction with the screening of "Jazzmania." The crowds packed the theater, and many were turned away so that Manager Trues, of the Columbia, and A. Kline, of Kline's, are expecting capacity houses when the program is repeated this evening.

The stage was built out to accommodate the models and dancers, and the public seemed well pleased with the show.

"That modeling is an art in itself, all will agree who saw the clever mannequins parade the new spring styles before the great audience at the Columbia last night, where standing room was at a premium, and where the style show by Kline's was staged to good advantage.

There was grace in every movement and posture of the young charming women selected by the Kline establishment to display the new costumes and even had not the comprehensive display been so ravishingly lovely in themselves the show would have been well worth attending.

But, ah! those new frocks—who would not look like a Pei in them? Such a bewildering riot of colors, such bewitching new effects, such becoming modes—seldom has a season been so favored.

The creations, no doubt are the very choicest selections from New York designing seasons, where Mr. Kline has recently made two trips. Assuredly they are the work of artists, masters who play with filmy fabrics, with contours and curves, with sleeves and basque and blouse and belt and hemline and panels as a symphony director plays with the reeds and strings and braces of his orchestra.

There was military which was a temptation, wraps, suits, sports wear and delightful little accessories that were of such smartness that one felt an almost irresistible desire to clutch and hold.

And there was a harmony about it, a gracious blending of tones, the softest of lighting, which yet was abundant, the picture was complete, the dancing so bewitching and graceful. As a whole the program was indeed well planned, and all who had been led to expect much have found their anticipations very tame in the face of realization.

In short it was an event that will not soon be forgotten. Those who staged it and performed it deserve much credit, and an appreciative audience at both performances were recorded, as they expressed it, something one would have to look for in large cities to equal.

The following dance program was given:

Grecian Vag Dance—Miss Florence Schofield Young by five maidens.

Pride of Pekin—An Oriental number by Miss Mary McGuire.

Columbine—By Miss Fairy Belle Mayo.

Jazzmania—By Miss Mildred Brown.

"Her Unborn Child," Powerful Sex Play

The love of a boy and girl swept into the current of an adult passion is the story of "Her Unborn Child," which opened last night at the Sun Theater by the Jack Ball Stock Company.

The strong mother love plays an important figure in the outcome of the false step made by the youths. On the one side is the mother, who believes in birth control. On the other, the good old-fashioned mother of a large family. As the play progresses it becomes a battle of the two mothers in righting one little wrong done by youth. Happiness is finally brought about to all the figures in the story. "Her Unborn Child" is a play which deserves a more beautiful title. The title is too trashy for the most wonderful story. The Jack Ball Stock Company should be commended very highly for the masterly manner in which they staged and acted this piece. The powerful appeal of this clever stock organization was strengthened a hundred fold with the presentation of their current attraction. It might be well if every mother and father of Portsmouth and surrounding territory could take the two or three hours to witness this play. As an entertainment it ranks with any of the best so far presented by the B&F players. As a powerful moral lesson it can be placed high in the percentage column. Taken in all this attraction is one of the best so far staged at the Sun.

A special matinee will be given Wednesday for ladies only, in addition to the bargain-day matinee today. "Bought and Paid For" will be given Tuesday.

The Liberal Man Is Often The Thrifty Man

Many people make the mistake of confusing thriftiness with stinginess.

On the contrary the thrifty man is often most liberal. His home is usually one of the best and he provides every luxury for his family. Thrift to him means careful, planned spending and systematic and regular savings deposits.

Thrift is always successful—no one ever regretted being thrifty.

MRS. ELIZABETH WELLERD, COLUMBUS, OHIO.

Suffered From Stomach Trouble and Rheumatism. Wants Her Friends to Know of Her Recovery.

Mrs. Elizabeth Wellerd, an aged resident of Columbus, living at 514 S. Fourth st., is another Kadi-look convert. In telling her experience, she says: "I was bothered a great deal with rheumatism, stomach trouble, and was in poor health generally. I had severe attacks of indigestion and bloating pains after eating, and ate very little food at that—hardly enough to keep alive. I was unable to sleep at night and usually in the evening my feet and limbs would ache all over with rheumatism and I would feel all crippled up. I tried Kadi-look and it helped me right away. My appetite is very good now and I get my sleep. I am getting around pretty well and have hardly been bothered at all with rheumatism. I have taken, all told, four bottles of Kadi-look, and it certainly has helped me wonderfully. I want my friends and neighbors to know what a fine remedy Kadi-look is."

Kadi-look can be had in Portsmouth at Fisher & Strick's Drug Store.—Advertisement.

Legion Auxiliary To Present Plays

Three comedies are to be presented in the High School Auditorium on the evening of Tuesday, April 3, under the auspices of the American Legion Auxiliary, who have secured the Liberty Dramatic Society, of Berlin College, for that time. The society, one of the leading college organizations of its kind, has, for the past 15 years, played before audiences in the large cities in the East and Middle West, and has gained mention for its work. The plays to be given on the evening of their appearance will include: "Lonesome Like," by Harold Brighouse, of the repertoire of the Gaiety Theater at Manchester, England; "The Boy Comes Home," a pleasing bit of English light comedy, by A. A. Milne, and Bernard Shaw's witty little farce, "How He Lied to Her Husband."

The proceeds of the evening will be used by the Auxiliary in helping needy ones who are brought to the attention of the members who endeavor to help in any possible way the families of the World War veterans who may be ill or in need.

Boats Forced To Bank By Storm; Gen. Wood Damaged

The full of the Ohio river was checked by a slight rise in the stream Monday night and the river was climbing slowly in the Portsmouth district Tuesday when a stage of 34.5 feet was registered here. The rough river due to the wind storm greatly interfered with steamboat traffic yesterday and a number of crafts were forced to tie up until the storm subsided. Caught in the gale at Higginsport, early yesterday the steamer General Wood bound for Pittsburg was tossed about on the waves and driven to shore and in the crash its gang plank was smashed. The vessel was not otherwise damaged and continued its journey after a delay of several hours. Running twenty-four hours behind her schedule due to delay caused by the storm the Andes departed at 6 a. m. Tuesday morning for Cincinnati.

N. & W. Depot In Waverly Burglarized; Three Men Arrested; One Breaks Jail

(Special to The Times.)

WAVERLY, March 12.—The Norfolk and Western depot was broken into Friday night about six o'clock. However nothing was taken as it is thought the burglar became frightened and hurriedly made his departure. The depot was locked at the time, the agent having gone to supper and the night man not having arrived. Later in the evening three men were arrested and put in jail for the night, one man escaping almost immediately and taking the stepladder and lock of his cell with him. No word has been received of his whereabouts although all surrounding towns have been notified. The facts concerning the attempted burglary are as follows: Entrance was gained by smashing a window with a bar of iron. While the burglar was in the depot office a freight came along and the conductor John Adams went to the station to give some papers to the agent. When close to the office he saw that the window was broken and that the man in the depot was not the agent. He was unable to leave his train, but he took a good look at the man and when he reached Glen Jean he notified the operator who called the police. Deputy Sheriff Ernest Dowdle and Chief of Police C. B. Murphy got on the job immediately and placed two men under arrest. They gave their names as George Keller and Frank Chestnut. The Chillicothe police were notified and about nine o'clock they sent word that they had made an arrest. Officers went after him and brought him before Mayor George B. Smith. The other two men had been taken to the County Jail in the meantime. The man arrested at Chillicothe gave his name as F. M. Kowalski. He told a very conflicting story, especially as to how and when he got through Waverly. He said he was arrested at Portsmouth the day before and shortly afterward released. The Portsmouth police were called and verified the story saying they had no charge they could hold him on. So the mayor ordered him to be locked up until morning when the conductor

John Adams was expected here to identify the man he saw in the depot. About 10:30 or a little later he was taken to the calaboose. The other two men were in the county jail and it was thought best to keep them separate. Within forty minutes from the time he was put in the cell Kowalski was gone. On his way home Chief Murphy dropped in to put some coal in the stove and found the prisoner gone, taking the staple and lock with him.

Mrs. McCall Still Missing; Victim Of "Triangle" Affair Laid To Rest

Relatives of Mrs. Alma Jones McCall of Otway, wife of Verna McCall, school teacher at Haden, held to the grand jury Monday on a manslaughter charge, have failed to locate the woman who is supposed to be in Corvinton according to the last word received from her by relatives in Otway. Mrs. McCall left her Otway home last Tuesday morning. Friday morning she talked over long distance telephone to her sister Mrs. Clark Wolford in Otway and informed her she was in Corvinton. Relatives have not gone to Corvinton as they do not have the slightest idea as to where to start a search that would lead to her hiding place. McCall who was released on $2500 bond returned to Otway Monday afternoon and is at the home of his brother-in-law and sister, Mayor and Mrs. Charles O. Mustard.

Funeral services for O. E. Blackburn were held from his home in Haden this morning at 10:30 o'clock with Rev. A. E. Murphy of Rushtown in charge. The Blackburn home was open from nine till ten for friends who wished to see the body. Many called at the home as the young man was well known throughout that part of the county.

Services were held at the home on account of the illness of the mother, who was overcome with grief Saturday night on learning of the death of her son.

Burial was in Rushtown cemetery.

Drys Must File Reports

ALBANY, N. Y., March 13.—(By the Associated Press)—The Anti-Saloon League of New York must file statements of expenditures in connection with political campaign, according to a decision handed down today by Supreme Court Justice Elie J. Stanley.

The order was granted upon the application of a group of residents of Troy who contended that the Anti-Saloon League was a political organization and should be compelled to comply with the provisions of the election law, which require that statements of campaign expenditures be filed with the secretary of state.

Child Killed By Storm

CHILLICOTHE, O., March 13.—(By the Associated Press)—Death of the four-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Campbell, Bourneville, Ross county, as a result of yesterday's high wind became known today. The child was struck on the head by the branch of a tree, ripped off by the wind.

FIRE DESTROYS AUTO OF REV. HAWK

A short circuit it is believed caused the fire which Monday afternoon destroyed the Ford coupe of Rev. J. B. Hawk of this city. He discovered smoke under the front seat, four miles this side of Jackson, and by the time he climbed out, the machine was a mass of flames and he just had time to save his trip. Rev. Hawk came to the city on the evening B. & O. train. His loss is covered by insurance.

Major Bills Of Legislature Yet To Be Acted Upon

COLUMBUS, O., March 13.—(By the Associated Press)—The legislature today appeared to be entering the lull before the storm which has preceded every adjournment in history. Having received practically all the bills to be introduced—with the exception of the biennial appropriation measures—both houses were expected to mark time most of this week, while some of the major measures of the session, including the finance bills and those proposing a gasoline tax and motor bus and truck regulation were being whipped into shape for consideration on the floor. Predictions were freely made that the business of the session would be completed shortly after April 1.

Brief sessions yesterday resulted in the passage of only one bill of any importance—the Bender-Spiller bill designed to speed up the tabulation of unofficial election returns. The bill now goes to Governor Donaher for his signature. Its enactment will mean that all county election officials must have a complete unofficial count in the hands of the secretary of state by noon of the day following the election or be subject to removal. Signature of the bill by the governor was expected to make it possible for newspapers to obtain complete returns much more quickly than heretofore, when many doubtful races were left undecided for several days because precinct and county officials had failed to tabulate their votes.

Two house bills by Representative Bloom, Republican, of Sandusky county, failed to meet with the approval of the house fish and game committee last night, both being indefinitely postponed. One would have prohibited commercial fishing in waters adjacent to Lake Erie in the spring season and the other was intended to decrease the daily quota of wild ducks to be shot by a hunter from 25 to 10. A large delegation of commercial fishermen from the Sandusky fishing district appeared before the committee to oppose the fish bill, declaring that its enactment would result in great hardship to them.

Murder Trial Delayed

WEST UNION, O., March 13.—(Special to The Times)—Indications at noon today were that several days would be consumed in the selection of a jury to try the case of the state against Robert Davis, charged with the slaying of George Webb, on a road near Seaman several months ago.

The trial, opened yesterday morning and when it was found that Ed Moore, of Liberty township, had been drawn for jury service, and that Ed Moore, of Wayne township, had been summoned, Judge A. Z. Blair, of Portsmouth, counsel for the defense, made a motion that the entire panel be vacated and the motion was granted.

This made it necessary to draw fifty additional names from the jury wheel which was done last night. This morning when only two were accepted as jurors by the state out of thirty-six examined, it was decided to summon 97 more and the summons for the 97 were sent out at noon. Those summoned for service are, slow to appear and this afternoon it was reported that several days would be taken up in getting a jury.

Death Toll

use for radio when "lost" trains were located by broadcasting from Chicago pleas to American radio fans to ascertain the whereabouts of the train and then report through wireless agencies to the two receiving stations here. That was attempted when telegraph and telephone lines were blown down by the storm.

COLUMBUS, O., March 13.—(By the Associated Press)—Scores of Ohio communities today were recovering from the high wind storm of yesterday which took a toll of two lives and did property damage estimated at thousands of dollars.

Many persons were injured, a few seriously. At Steubenville, James Baker, four years old, was swept from the sidewalk into the street, and under the wheels of a passing street car. He was decapitated. Ten Hoshelmann, the other victim, was killed at Massillon.

Communication and power transmission lines were crippled and buildings unroofed in practically all sections of the state. Trees and poles were blown down. Interurban cars in many instances were delayed for hours.

LOUISVILLE, KY., March 13.—(By the Associated Press)—Nine persons dead, more than eighty others reported to have been injured, and estimates of less caused by property damage over a wide area, close to the million dollar mark stood today as the toll of the violent wind storm which swept Kentucky Sunday night and early Monday.

Reports reaching Louisville over partially paralyzed wires, told of the death of a family of three when a Logan county home was demolished. The victims tentatively were identified as Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Stahl and their young son.

Three persons, William Hall, 35, his four-year-old daughter, Catherine, and the infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Logan Griffith, were killed when the wind lifted the Hall farm house, in Madison county, carried it fifty yards and splintered it around its thirteen occupants.

Two persons were injured seriously at this place. Two women, Mrs. L. C. Dossy, 31, and Mrs. Margaret Cox, 31, were killed in Edmonson county. Mrs. Dossy's husband probably was injured fatally.

Property damage resulted from damaged buildings, shattered display windows, levelled smoke stacks in towns and in rural districts from razed dwellings and farm buildings, felled trees and livestock killed by falling timbers.

Telegraph and telephone service over a wide area in western Kentucky, was paralyzed by prostrated lines.

Storm Takes Heavy Toll

NASHVILLE, TENN., March 13.—(By the Associated Press)—With a known death toll of thirty persons, nearly one hundred injured and property damage that will reach several millions of dollars, Tennessee this morning was recovering from one of the most severe storms in its history which swept practically all sections of the state Sunday night. The gale which was accompanied by rain, hail and destructive lightning, reached at times a velocity of 85 miles an hour.

Twenty persons are known to be dead in the community of Pinson and Deaturburg in Madison county, West Tennessee, while Nashville and middle Tennessee suffered heavy damage. Little news has come from the eastern section of the state. The towns of Pinson and Deaturburg were practically wiped off the map and the hospitals of Jackson near the scene of the disaster, are now filled with injured which number over 75 persons.

Harding

president would have been welcome if he had been on adventure bent. The clubs, the handsome mansions on the ocean front, the big hotels with their hundreds of visitors from all parts of the United States would have been glad to see more of Mr. Harding. He could even have had a reunion of the alumni association of "Best minds" of preinauguration fame for Palm Beach in recent days has had some notable exits, everybody from fellow editors to jurists, theatrical producers and motion picture stars.

But Mr. Harding's hours away from the household while it was anchored off Palm Beach were few and far between. He played a lengthy game of bridge aboard the "Pioneer" in the forenoon of his first day here and wasn't very much in the mood for golf in the afternoon or else it was the gallery that threw him off his game. Anyway as he drove off the first tee, some of the onlookers like Arthur Hammerstein and Mr. Edgar Selwyn of theatrical fame made sundry resolutions to themselves never to aspire to the presidency "because the people ruin a man's golf game."

President Prefers Quiet Part of State
Mr. Harding has been coming to Florida for twenty years or more but he prefers the quieter parts of the state to the life at Palm Beach. He probably would be the last to admit it, for when one is a president he cannot express preferences between rival resorts but it is a fact that on this and previous trips to Florida he has just passed at Palm Beach and passed its fashionable colony by with a friendly but not lengthy visit.

Members of the presidential party professed to be enjoying themselves on the houseboat. They said the president was really resting, that he wasn't writing any letters or studying any documents or otherwise burdening himself with the responsibilities of office. Naturally he chats about the past, present and future as he reclines on deck but most of the time Mr. Harding plays bridge with his companions or plays golf. There is no doubt that he gained complete relaxation on this journey, and one week has made him feel like a new man.

Tomorrow the president will be at Miami and will see Attorney General Daugherty again. The latter hoped to be well enough to drift northward with the president when the houseboat begins its return trip to Ormond and St. Augustine.

The Miami colony includes few Republican national committeemen who are on vacations, Secretary Davis, Senator Hale, former Senator Frelinghuysen and other friends of the president. Two or three days will be spent on deep sea fishing before the northward cruise is resumed. And between bites there may be a chat or two about nineteen twenty-four which somehow every day grows nearer and nearer.

An Unfailing Way To Banish Hairs

(Beauty Notes)

Ugly hairy growths can be removed in the privacy of your own home if you get a small original package of delatone and mix into a paste enough of the powder and water to cover the hairy surface. This should be left on the skin about 2 minutes, then removed and the skin washed and every trace of hair will have vanished. No harm or inconvenience can result from this treatment, but be sure you buy real delatone. —Advertisement.

How to Make Pine Cough Syrup at Home

Has no equal for prompt results. Takes but a moment to prepare, and saves you about $2.

Pine is used in nearly all prescriptions and remedies for coughs. The reason is that pine contains several elements that have a remarkable effect in soothing and healing the membranes of the throat and chest. Pine cough syrups are combinations of pine and syrup. The "syrup" part is usually plain sugar syrup. To make the best pine cough remedy the money can buy, put 2 1/2 ounces of Pine in a pint bottle, and fill up with home-made sugar syrup. Or you can use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you make a full pint—more than you can buy ready-made for three times the money. It is pure, good and tastes very pleasant. You can feel this take hold of a cough or cold in a way that means business. The cough may be dry, hoarse and tight, or may be persistent, hoarse from the formation of "loose" mucus. The cause is the same—irritated membranes—and this Pine and Syrup combination will stop it usually in 24 hours or less. Splendid, too, for bronchial asthma, hoarseness, or any ordinary throat ailment. Pine is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and is famous the world over for its prompt effect upon coughs.

Beware of substitutes. Ask your druggist for "2 1/2 ounces of Pine" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pine Co., St. Wayne Ind.

Gasoline Tax Favored

COLUMBUS, O., March 12.—(By the Associated Press)—The two cents a gallon tax bill was recommended for passage by the highways committee of the house of representatives today.

The bill probably will not come up for passage in the house before next week as the committee ordered it reprinted because of numerous amendments there were made by the committee.

As recommended for passage, the funds derived from the gasoline tax would be distributed as follows:

Twenty-five per cent to municipalities for city streets, allotted on basis of population.

Twenty-five per cent to counties for county and township roads.

Twenty-five per cent to county commissioners to be used in maintaining of the main market roads and intercounty highways to be allotted on basis of motor population outside the municipalities.

Twenty-five per cent to the county commissioners to be used for maintenance of main market roads and intercounty highways on the basis of unimproved state highways in the county, with provision that any surplus may be used on county and township roads.

It is expected that an effort will be made to amend the bill when it comes up for passage to reduce the tax to one cent per gallon.

Plan Early Adjournment

COLUMBUS, O., March 12.—(By the Associated Press)—Practical completion of the regular session of the 85th general assembly by April 1, or shortly afterward is the plan of the house, which is operating under the supervision of a committee which brings before it only bills considered likely to pass, is expected to complete its work by that time.

Actual adjournment would not come until about April 15, under the plan which calls for a recess of probably two weeks beginning about April 1, to allow the governor to sign or veto bills passed by the assembly.

The senate's opinion on this plan has not been formally announced, but it was believed that the upper house would agree to such a proposal.

Completion of the session's work early in April would establish a record for the last several sessions, most of which have continued until May and the last until June.

President's Houseboat Frequently Goes Aground

FT. LAUDERDALE, FLA., March 12.—(By the Associated Press)—Unless unexpectedly changed, plans of President Harding and the presidential party on the houseboat Pioneer, today called for the usual round of golf ashore while members of the boat's crew survey the possibilities of making Miami by tomorrow, barring further groundings such as encountered yesterday.

The narrowness of the channel and the frequency of sand bars yesterday hampered the progress of the party and the Pioneer frequently went aground, only to ease off again. Late in the day, however, the tide came up and helped matters, but progress again was hampered by nightfall and the party gave up hopes of reaching Miami. The Southern object of the vacation cruise, before some time Wednesday.

Worst and Worse

My bean lives in the same neighborhood as I do. One evening we had a quarrel. We usually meet at the same corner every morning and go to work together, but the next morning I was too peeved to look at him standing a few feet from me. When the car came I made a mad rush to get on. My foot slipped, and down I went, right in front of my bean. The hot tears of embarrassment came, and in my excitement I took me unusually long to get up. When I did, finally, and ran to get the car, it was gone! I'll never talk to that man as long as I live.—Chicago Tribune.

Superstitions Concerning Opals

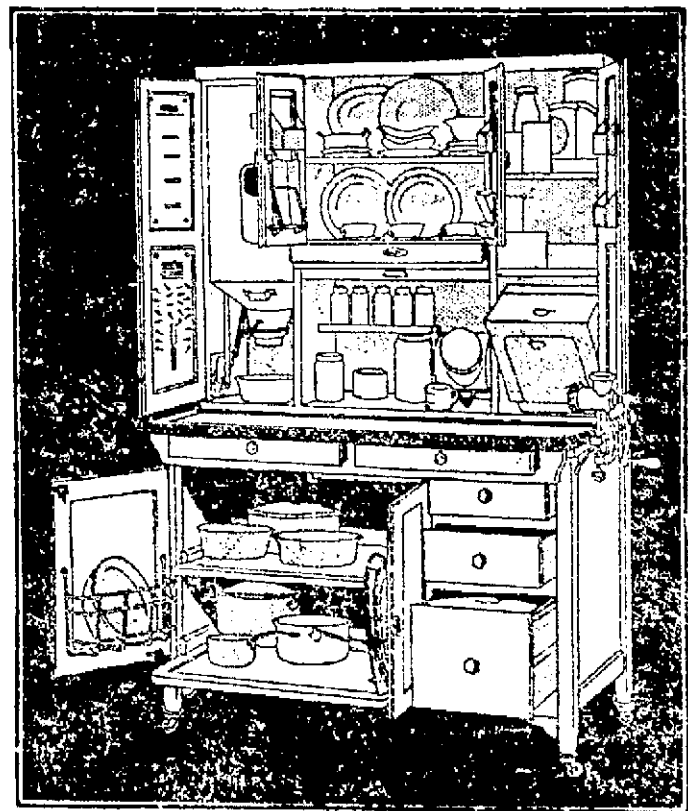

The present-day superstitions dislike of the opal comes from Russia. In that country the peasants consider the opal to be possessed of all the powers of the evil eye. During the revolution thousands of pounds' worth of these gems were destroyed solely on account of this strong belief. Opals are seldom, if ever, cut into facets like diamonds, but are almost invariably polished into a convex surface similar to a lens. An opal is too brittle to risk cutting, and a further curious fact about it is that a cut opal loses most of its wonderful coloring and sparkle.

Miss Dolly Wise

She is here to answer any and all questions concerning love, matrimony, troubles, woes, etiquette, etc. Inquiries should be addressed to Miss Dolly Wise, care The Daily Times, Portsmouth, Ohio.

Dear Dolly—Will you please tell me what would be nice to serve on St. Patrick's day, as I am entertaining. And if you know some game that would be easy to play, or any thing that would help out, I would be very glad. MRS. X. Y. Z.

You will find all kinds of suggestions for entertaining and serving on St. Patrick's day in the current magazines, and you can buy all kinds of favors and decorations in the local stores.

Dear Dolly—Please give me the addresses of the following players. I have just moved to Portsmouth and would like for you to publish these if it isn't too much trouble. Richard Barthelmess, Katherine Macdonald, Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Miles Minter, Harold Lloyd. Also tell me if Harrison Ford is married and how old he is. TIMES READER.

Here are the addresses asked for: Richard Barthelmess, Griffith Studios, Mamaroneck, New York; Katherine Macdonald, 908 Girard street, Los Angeles, California; Douglas Fairbanks, Los Angeles, Calif.; Mary Miles Minter, Los Angeles, Calif.; Harold Lloyd, Los Angeles, Calif.; Harrison Ford is about 28 years of age and so far as I know he is still single.

Dear Dolly—As this is my first experience of ever loving anybody, I am going to write to you for advice. I have gone with other boys but never did love them like I do this one. He is about twenty some years old. I am seventeen. Do you think he is too old for me? We speak when we meet each other on the street, but that is all the farther it goes. We usually meet down town. Dolly, what can I do or say to make him pay more attention to me? If it is the way I dress and my complexion, please tell me. Do you have to be talkative to get a fellow?

THANK YOU.

You are getting along very well for a beginner, and if you just con-time to meet and speak and let it go at that for a few years, I think you will be able to get and hold a "fellow" as you call them.

My Dear Dolly—In reading the paper the other week I noticed where a young lady came to you for advice on what to do in regards to her keeping company with a fellow where her friends told her that he is nothing but a bum going from town to town. Now Dolly here are two questions I want to ask you: What is a bum? Why is a bum? Furthermore, this fellow has worked ever since she has known him and she says he dresses real nice. And does a bum dress real nice? And will a bum work? And how does her friends know so much about this bum's business. Dolly, is it what you used to be, or it what you are today? I think those two last questions covers all, doesn't it. Dolly? Say, Dolly, your wise old owl, you! Here is my side of a bum stand point. Probably this girl's friends want her to keep company with a disguised run-runner that goes to church on Sunday to conceal his boot-legginess, and probably he has done a hitch or two in some penitentiary—who knows? But if a stranger comes to town why he is a natural born bum. Dolly, I know of a man who rode the rods all the way from Atlantic City, N. J. down here and when he got off opposite the Whitaker-Glossner plant he went straight to the employment office and got a job that same day, and mind you he had been riding for four days and nights and no sleep and that has been nine or ten months ago and he is still working.

A NEW BOSTON READER.

The girl who wrote that letter said her folks and friends did not want her to go with the man she was writing about because he was a stranger here, and they did not know anything about him. Some had heard that he was a trifling sort and had a "past" or something and they did not think he was good enough for her. I don't blame them for that, and I don't think girls should pick up with and marry men whom they know nothing about. The majority of men who come here to fill responsible positions are all right, but every girl who expects to marry one of them owes it to herself and her family to get his life's history before she consents to marry him. Of course there is a difference between a man who is down and out temporarily, and one who is down and out by choice. Sometimes the best of men find themselves out of a job for awhile but the worth-while man will get one at the first opportunity, or work at any kind of a job until he gets one to his liking. For instance the man who rode the bumpers from Atlantic City, must have been ambitious, or he would not have come here to look for work. He could have lived from hand to mouth like the majority of bums, if he had stayed at this popular resort. It is what you are today that counts, but there is always a feeling that you might slip back into what you used to be, that makes people leary of the man or woman with a "past."

The person who wanted the "Face on the Bar-room Floor" may get it by calling 2632-R.

Dear Miss Wise—I saw in the paper where you told some lady not to wash her hair too much, but take dry shampoos, and I would like to know how to take them myself. My hair is so oily I have to wash it every week. B. B. R.

You can give yourself a dry shampoo with corn meal or talcum powder.

TAX PAYER BILL—I don't know if you or the man who was appointed, but I was told that he lived on a farm and was a farmer and stood the highest and that was the reason he was appointed. What let's me out, and if you are not satisfied, you will have to take the matter up with the one who appointed him. I had nothing at all to do with it. I'm not interested in the other man you mentioned, either.

Adventures Of The Twins

BY OLIVE ROBERTS BARTON

OFF went the Twins to Sugar-Plum Land, which lay between Castor Land and Plaster Land. "What'd you come for?" asked someone.

And there stood a chocolate rabbit with white icing done all over him like an embroidery pattern.

"Well," answered Nancy, politely. "We came to set things to rights."

Local relatives have received word that Theodore Lilly, a member of this year's graduating class of the Indiana Dental College, Indianapolis, has been signally honored by being elected college demonstrator for the next year. Mr. Lilly, who is a graduate of P. H. S. and who lives at 1535 Gellia Street, however, declined the position as he expects to open an office of his own next year.

Each year the Indiana Dental College elects three or four students to the position of demonstrator.

"Well, it's high time somebody did," said the rabbit. "King Gingerbread made a new law yesterday and body can obey and we'll all have to go to jail unless he takes it back."

"What law?" asked Nick.

"He said bathing was a good habit and every Sugar-Plum Lander would have to take a bath twice a day."

"That's awful!" replied Nick. "Even once is bad enough."

"It won't do even at that," said the embroidery-pattern rabbit, wagging his ears. "We can't even bathe once, any of us, except the Kewpie off the top of the wedding cake. It's made of bisque and won't run; but how in creation can folk made of cake and sugar take a bath? We'd all run away and mix together and when we dried off, like as not I'd have an ear off, the knick-knack dog a leg off the lemon cookie sparrow and a tail off the gum-drop pig."

"I never thought of that!" declared Nancy. "We'll go to see King Gingerbread at once. Maybe he's taken the law back."

"Goodbye!" cried the chocolate rabbit. "I'll spread the good news."

And away he hopped to tell the other Sugar-Plum Landers that nobody need endanger his life by taking a bath.

"Say," he called, stopping suddenly. "You'd better stop at the Cut-Out Lady's house and ask her to sew King Gingerbread's buttons on straight. She sews them crooked and he gets mad and makes silly laws."

JACK DAW'S ADVENTURES

"Now, what will become of this poor horse balloon?" asked Jack. "Oh, well, I'll have him repaired," replied Cappy. "It will teach him not to get so bulky." Then Jack's attention was attracted to several cow balloons which were floating through a great white space in the air a short way off.

JACK DAW'S ADVENTURES

Cappy noticed Jack watching them and he explained that they were the famous cows which lived in the Milky Way. "That stretch of white," said Cappy, "is the Milky Way." Then, suddenly one of the cows went up into the air and over the moon's head. He landed safely on the cloud Jack was on.

"Wasn't that a pretty jump?" shouted Jack. "Why, certainly it was," replied Cappy. "That's the cow you've often read about. It's the cow the jumped over the moon." Flip, in the meantime, had been quiet so long that his master turned to look for him. A surprise greeted Jack. (Continued)

THE THREE MALEFACTORS

BY E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM
(Copyright, 1922, by E. Phillips Oppenheim Arrest, NEA Service, Inc.)

Yendetta begins between MICHAEL SAYERS, noted criminal, and SIR NORMAN GREYES, once of Scotland Yard, after Sayers' beautiful housemaid, JANET, saves him from Sir Norman by shooting dead the officer sent to arrest him. Janet becomes Sayers' wife and accomplice. In many exploits, Michael escapes arrest by taking desperate chances. Janet is an able assistant, but because he greatly admires the many good qualities he recognizes in her, Sir Norman deals with her as leniently as possible.

In the Leeds bank robbery Michael (known to Greys as "Stanfield") barely escapes and has to flee the country.

A plot of Michael and another criminal, Paul Gont, to ruin the political leader, Philippe Lantard, is frustrated by Sir Norman.

Janet's Version

It was about four months after I had been in the service of Mrs. Trumperton-Smith, that I decided to rob her. I first went to her because, day by day, I felt the need of money for those luxuries to which I had become accustomed. After my disastrous visit to Paris, no news whatever had come to me from my husband. A slack period had set in at the dressmaking establishment where I had been employed, and I was informed that any services were no longer necessary. I spent a month at a manicurist's and a few weeks at a photographic studio.

Mrs. Trumperton-Smith advertised in the Morning Post for a companion and lady's maid. I won the post on account of my manners and appearance. My mistress was a lady of ample person and ample means. She lived in excellent style and apparently had plenty of money. She was a widow about 45 years old, still good-looking in a florid sort of way, and well enough educated from the middle-class point of view. Men were her one and everlasting hobby.

We were staying at the magnificent Hotel at Brighton when the idea which I have mentioned, of robbing my mistress, first took definite shape in my mind. I should have bided my time, I think, but for two reasons. One was that the salary which she paid me was absurdly small and I saw no chance of saving anything, and the other was the very imminent fear of being anticipated. Mrs. Trumperton-Smith was not always so discreet as she should have been in her acquaintances.

At the present time she was on exceedingly friendly terms with a Mr. Sidney Bloor, whom I put down, from the moment I first saw him, as an undoubted adventurer. He was always dressed in the height of fashion, and he had acquired the shilliboleth of the up-to-date young man of the moment. He made languid attempts to kiss me whenever he found me alone.

He found me one evening, some four months after our arrival in Brighton, alone in the sitting-room at about the hour when Madam was sometimes pleased to dispense cocktails. A spasmodic attempt at gallantry having been met and repulsed, he lingered to watch me busy preparing a hair-ornament which my mistress desired to wear that evening.

"Where is the old bird?" he asked caustically.

"Madam is out playing bridge with some friends," I told him.

"What little gewgaws are you sending her down in tonight?"

"Whatever she chooses to wear," I replied.

"Only last night," he remarked, "she told me that it was generally you who made the selection."

"She usually does wear what I put on," I assented. "Which do you admire her in most, Mr. Bloor?"

"The young man scratched his chin thoughtfully.

"It doesn't matter to me what she wears," he sighed. "I know a little girl, though, who would look the real thing decked out in those diamonds, eh?"

"I expect you have a large acquaintance amongst my sex," I replied demurely.

"You're a cold young woman, Janet," he complained. "My last evening, too."

"Are you going away?"

"Back to the City tomorrow. I'm my own master and all that, of course—take a week or two just when I want it—but one has to pick up a bit of the rind now and then."

"If it is really your last night," I said, "tell me what jewelry you would like the mistress to wear this evening, and I will put it out for her."

"What about the diamond necklace, then?" he suggested.

My mistress came bustling in a moment or two later and bustled her—"If in making the cocktails, I went through into her bedroom to lay out her gown. It was perfectly clear to me now that if I were going to rob Mrs. Trumperton-Smith at all, it had better be done quickly.

The drinking of cocktails was concluded a little more quickly than usual, and Mrs. Trumperton-Smith found me in the bedroom, full of what passed with her as geniality. It was a quality, however, which was entirely superficial, and in a general way I found her disagreeable, selfish and jealous to a degree.

She withdrew the key to her jewelry case from a bracelet and passed it to me.

I selected the diamond necklace, earrings and bracelets, looked up the case and returned the key. My mistress' expression softened as she looked at herself in the glass.

She picked up her gold bag, looked inside to see that I had placed her handkerchief there, and turned away.

"See that the fire is kept up in the sitting-room, Janet," she ordered. "Mr. Bloor and I will take our coffee there."

I went into the steward's room and had my supper as usual, and I also paid a visit to Mr. Bloor's bedroom and borrowed certain trifles which I proposed to use later on. I happened to know that both he and Mrs. Trumperton-Smith were engaged to play bridge after dinner at a neighboring hotel.

I contrived to leave open the connecting door between the bedroom and the sitting-room, and to be in the former when they returned for their coffee. Madam had come in for her cloak, and they were on the point of starting out again, when her escort at last gave me the cue for which I had been waiting.

"I say, Mimi," he drawled—he called her 'Mimi' although she weighed fourteen stone—"I don't feel comfortable walking along the front with you in those diamonds. Leave them behind, there's a dear."

"Just as you like, dear," she assented meekly. "Perhaps you're right, especially if we go on to supper afterward. Here Janet!"

I hurried out.

"I REMOVED HER OF HER JEWELS. ALL THE TIME MR. BLOOR WAS WATCHING WITH A GLEAM IN HIS EYE."

"Yes, madam?"

"Take these off—all of them," she directed, extending her arms and pointing her neck. "I am going out and may be late."

I relieved her of the jewels. All the time Mr. Bloor was watching with a gleam in his eyes.

"If you will give me your key, madam, I will lock them up," I suggested.

"Oh, that will do when I get back," she said. "Put them in one of the drawers, Janet."

They went off together. I did exactly as I had been bidden, and afterward lingered in the sitting-room while I completed my plans. I had just come to a decision when there was a sharp knock at the door. The manager of the hotel—a Mr. Leon Grant—made his appearance. He looked around the empty sitting-room.

"I understood that Mrs. Trumperton-Smith was up here," he said courteously.

"Mrs. Trumperton-Smith went out some little time ago," I told him.

"What time do you expect your mistress back?" he inquired.

"She did not say, sir," I replied. "The last time she went out to play bridge, it was about one o'clock when she returned. Mr. Bloor is with her."

The manager nodded and turned away.

"Can I give her any message, sir?" I asked.

He hesitated, closed the door and came back again.

"I should imagine," he said, looking at me attentively, "that you are a trusted servant."

"I was engaged as companion-lady's-maid, sir," I told him. "I believe that my mistress has every confidence in me."

He nodded.

"To tell you the truth," he explained, "I am a little worried about your mistress' jewels. There was a small robbery last night at a hotel in the neighborhood, and I have had an indirect sort of warning from the police that there are thieves about."

Mrs. Trumperton-Smith has the reputation of being very careless. I came to ask her if she would allow me to keep her jewels in the hotel safe."

"I should be very glad if you could persuade her to do so," I assured him. "I suggested it when we arrived, but Madam likes to take them out and look at them when she is alone."

"It is scarcely fair upon any hotel," the manager pointed out a little quizzically. "Will you be so kind as to tell me where she keeps them?"

I showed him the case, although I said nothing of the diamonds in the drawer. He frowned severely.

"It is placing temptation in people's way," he declared.

"The door of the bedroom is always locked," I reminded him, "and you have a night watchman. Then, too, we are on the fourth story—"

"My dear young woman," he interrupted irritably, "those things are nothing to an experienced thief. The hotel safe is the only place for such jewelry as Mrs. Trumperton-Smith possesses."

His wife, Sophia, succumbed to influenza and pneumonia on February 18th. Ten days later her mother, Mrs. Franklin Nichols, of Columbus, who had come to care for her, contracted influenza and passed away Wednesday, February 28th, at the age of 63. She was the mother of Charles Nichols, who resides about one mile northwest of Hamden on the Allensville road. On Sunday, March 4th, the infant daughter of Shirley Waldron, age about 19 days, died. 7,352 FREIGHT CARS STILL TO BE DELIVERED

Brewers Settle With Washington

CINCINNATI, O., Mar. 13.—Settlement of the civil liability claim against the Schaefer Brewery Company of Cincinnati, following the conviction of three officials on charges of violating the federal prohibition act, has been made by Washington officials, according to information received here today by Chas. M. Dean International Revenue Collector.

The settlement reached, was reported to have been $5,000 and grew out of a raid conducted on the brewery in which it is alleged beer containing more than the lawful amount of alcohol was found.

The three officials were found guilty and are now at liberty under bond pending their appeal now in the U. S. Circuit Court of Appeals here.

Big Revival Again Under Way Tonight

Closing Days To Be Banner
Ones At The Big Tabernacle

(BY A. P. HAIGHT)

With a special service this afternoon for high school girls and boys, followed by a great service this evening for everybody, the New Crusade is gaining momentum with each passing hour and this week will round up the harvest of the past several days. Last evening in practically all, if not all of the ten co-operating churches, workers meetings were held and a review of the crusade made, with a preview of the services this week.

The cards that have been turned in by those coming forward at the services so far, have been gone over and those who have come for recognition will be given definite work and those who came preferring the various churches as a place for their religious affiliation, will be visited and adopted into the religious life of the church and Bible school.

Dr. Anderson stated that with the great start made that he felt sure this week would be one of great results. The fact that the party is putting as much of a six week program as they can into a four week campaign has made the work here very strenuous. While the personal workers of the various churches are just beginning to find joy in their work and this week is going to find them making the best of every minute that is left.

It took several days of the campaign for the fact that the New Crusade was really as big as it has proven to be, to seek in. Even the ministers and the chairman of the campaign, Mr. Breece, did not fully visualize its far reaching effects. The party itself, while having a great vision of a meeting in Portsmouth, have been pleasantly surprised with the smoothness with which the various churches have entered into it and have fellowshiped together. It will, or ought to give them a vision of the many other things they can accomplish for the community's welfare by putting all their strength behind the things that make for a better city.

The Bible schools proved the value of co-operation in 1920 and 1921, but in 1922, various things prevented the co-operative spirit seemed to be fatigued and the schools went down. It is beginning to come again now, it is being kindled anew by the New Crusade. This is shown by the fact that the city organization of the heads of all the schools are planning meetings for the discussion of plans for their schools, and unless we miss our guess the Bible schools of Portsmouth will see an awakening and make worth while gains within the next few weeks. Cooperation will do it, but that means work.

Another thing that has led to the success of the New Crusade, every one who has attended the meetings from the least to the greatest, have been able to take part in it from the financial budget to the saving of souls. Its entire finances have been cared for by small contributions by those who have been in attendance each night and no one has been solicited individually for any given amount. The promises of the children with the dollars of the parents has given each a chance to help according to ability.

Then the song services with the organization and drilling of one of the largest choruses that Portsmouth has had in many months, will prove an asset to the various churches, for the splendid direction of Mr. Jenkins with his very capable "sidekick" B. D. Ackley, is a privilege no singer can fail to appreciate.

In summing up the sermons, it would require more time, more space and then would not be done adequately. Dr. Anderson has given in these studies addresses the results of many years of study, research and experience, and while it would be impossible for one person to absorb all of them, the bits that will be retained will be of lasting benefit, whether used as an aid to further study or as a moral precept. And when the party has gone to other fields, the heaven they have left in the city of Portsmouth will continue its work until the "whole lump" is affected by its power.

Special To Times

WAVERLY, March 13.—Charles H. Smith, who has been in Colorado Springs for the past year or two, where he was in charge of the Veterans' Bureau, has given up his position with the government and has opened up a law office. Charles was admitted to the bar in Ohio before leaving home, but he was compelled to take the Colorado examination before being admitted to that state. Attorney Smith is very enthusiastic over the climate, the people and the opportunities out there, and his many friends here wish him his full share of success in the Rocky Mountain country.

Kohler's Veto Of Cleveland
Gas Ordinance Overridden

CLEVELAND, O., March 13.—City Council last night passed over Mayor Fred Kohler's veto, the Marshall gas ordinance. The vote was 30 to 3.

In taking this action, Council disregarded the advice of City Law Director Paul Lamb, who holds that the ordinance virtually compels the East Ohio Gas Company to quit Cleveland unless it accepts Council's terms. Appeals of civic organizations to delay action a week also were disregarded.

The ordinance repeals the basic franchise of 1902, under which the East Ohio has been operating and offers a new franchise providing for a sliding rate of 40 to 75 cents a thousand cubic feet with a minimum monthly charge of 80 cents. The company demands 50 to 75 cents with a minimum charge of $1 for two years and then 55 to 85 cents for the next three years.

When the ordinance was passed by Council two weeks ago the Company notified its consumers that its rates were the best it could offer and that service would be discontinued May 1, unless Council accepted them. At the same time it warned the consumers to prepare for a substitute fuel.

The ordinance becomes effective at the end of forty days unless there is a referendum. The company might shut off gas at that time, Director Lamb holds, and not wait until May 1, the date allowed by the Supreme Court of Ohio.

"Be Heard On High";
Then Calls It Off

JAMESTOWN, KY., Mar. 12.—Rev. Joseph Woodridge, Methodist minister who entered into a fast while engaged in a revival meeting here, stated, that through fasting and prayer his petition for the salvation of sinners would be "heard on high" closed his fast with the meeting.

For six days he abstained from all nourishment and the denial so told on his strength that he had to sit down four times during his final sermon. He had declared that he would end the "hunger strike" when some penitent had confessed sin and joined the church but his appeal was in vain. The revival closed without a joinder.

Unusual Entertainment Will Be Given
Here By Oberlin College Dramatic Club

The Oberlin College Dramatic Club, which plays here Tuesday night, April 3, under the auspices of the local American Legion Auxiliary, is one of the leading dramatic organizations of the middle west. On its tours during the Easter and Christmas holidays, it carries a complete equipment of scenery, lighting effects, properties, etc., designed for its own programs of modern one-act plays. The casts are chosen from a membership of 150 young men and women, after long and close competition, a feature of which is the fortnightly production, throughout the year, of English, French, Russian, Irish, Chinese, Japanese and American drama. In the small theatre housed in one of the college lecture halls. Here a stage fitted with modern lighting apparatus and multiple sets of interiors and exteriors promises ample opportunity for experimental work along various lines. The Oberlin club does not attempt the stereotyped college musical show, but confines itself strictly to comedy, melodrama and tragedy, ranging from Dunsany's fantastic "thrillers" through folk-play and sophisticated ultra-modern farce to such poignant things as "Riders To The Sea." Among recent productions are Bernard Shaw's "Candida," and "You Never Can Tell," Housman's "Prunella," Parkes' "Pomander Walk," Barrie's "The Admirable Crichton," and twenty other plays from the repertoires of the Abbey Theatre, Dublin, the Provincetown Players, Washington Square Players, Dunsany, Tagore, Tompkins, Barker, Henry Arthur Jones, Ibsen, the Forty-seven Works, contemporary French drama and novellas from the literature of the Orient. The present tour is under the direction of Philip D. Shelman, associate professor of English Literature on the Oberlin faculty. Added interest locally will be given to the coming of this club by the fact that Miss Lillian Matthews, talented daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George E. Matthews, will take a leading part in the play.

Many Oppose Gasoline Tax

Members of the Portsmouth Automobile Club are opposed to the bill to place a tax of one cent on every gallon of gasoline. Manager T. J. Coe has received close to 100 replies on a questionnaire he sent out on the bill and all but about a half a dozen voted "No" on the proposed passage of the bill.

Many do not know what the bill provides for and in order to set them right Representative Adam Frick has furnished Manager Coe with the following:

"The tax is to be collected from wholesalers, thus reducing the cost of collection to minimum. The money is to be divided as follows:

25 per cent to municipalities for city streets, to be allotted on the basis of motor population in each; 25 per cent to counties for county and township roads; 25 per cent to county commissioners to be used for maintenance of the main market and intercounty roads in each county, to be allotted on the basis of motor population outside of municipalities; 25 per cent to county commissioners to be used for maintenance of main market and intercounty roads in each county, to be allotted on the basis of miles of unimproved state highway in each county. Any surplus is to be used on county and township roads.

Perfect Platonic Friendship

The friendship between the great artist, Michelangelo, and the Roman noblewoman, Vittoria Colonna, is one of the world's most illustrious examples of platonic friendship, says Oliver Barton in the Mentor Magazine. When they first met, Vittoria Colonna was forty-six and Michelangelo sixty. She became the greatest influence in the life of the fiery genius. They were accustomed to meet outside of the church of San Silvestro and discuss painting and life. The first of these dialogues was set down by another artist and later published as Michelangelo's "Dialogues on Painting."

After withdrawing to the cloister the Marquessa Colonna continued to communicate with the master. A book of her sonnets was always with him. She died in 1547, but until his death he remained as devoted to her memory as he had been to her in life.

Fashion To Have Style Show At Eastland

Patrons of the Eastland theatre will enjoy an unusual treat next Thursday evening, when the fashion show of the Women's Wear, Shop of Gallia and Gay streets will stage its semi-annual fashion promenade. To the strains of sweet music by a special orchestra seven local young women, clad in the newest creations in coats, capes, suits and dresses will parade across the stage and on a runway extending out into the auditorium, which was especially constructed for this occasion by Manager Woods of the Eastland. Two performances will be given at 6:30 and at 8:30.

In conjunction with the regular program a feature picture, "June Madonnas," Manager Wm. Adams has been preparing for this style show for months and on his last visit to New York purchased a number of copies of Parisian imports for use in this display.

ASHLAND MAN IS KILLED IN RAID

ASHLAND, Ky., Mar. 12—Edgar (Mike) Bunch, 1220 East Winchester avenue, was fatally wounded when the soft drink stand in the old Messersmith building on Fifteenth street, was raided by prohibition agents headed by Pat Murphy. Bunch died at the hospital a few minutes later. It is not known who fired the fatal shot, so many were exchanged. He was shot once, the bullet piercing the external coracoid artery in the right side of his neck. Loss of blood was the cause of death. Bunch was standing behind the back partition when he was shot. He fell where he stood and bled profusely before he was taken away in an ambulance. He died before they had taken him from the elevator in the Ashland General Hospital. No one else was wounded although a bullet pierced the cap of Patrolman Lloyd Combs of the Catlettsburg police department. Numerous shots were fired by the raiding officers after Bunch had opened fire, they claim. Federal Prohibition Agent Murphy said that as he and his party started to enter the door to search the soft drink stand somebody locked it. They broke in the door and as they stepped beyond the partition, Bunch opened fire from behind a second partition, shooting Combs' cap from his head, the agent added.

Several of the agents returned the fire and the men in the place scurried for cover. Bunch fell, and as someone yelled that Bunch had been shot, the agents made a rush for the back end of the room and found him lying on the floor behind the bar. He was wearing no coat.

A search was made and a small amount of moonshine whisky was found in a pitcher on the bar in the rear of the room, near where Bunch had been standing. The remnants of a jug and the fast disappearing wet stain was on the floor in front of the bar.

Murphy claims that a small .38 Colt's pistol was found on the floor beside the dying man and that four of the shells had been discharged.

Patrolman Combs says that he was the first to enter the place and that just as he stepped beyond the front partition someone stuck a gun through a hole in the back partition and opened fire at him, shooting his cap from his head. He added that he drew his gun and shot five times. He said that he heard several more shots but did not know who fired them.

Kills Self

At Altar

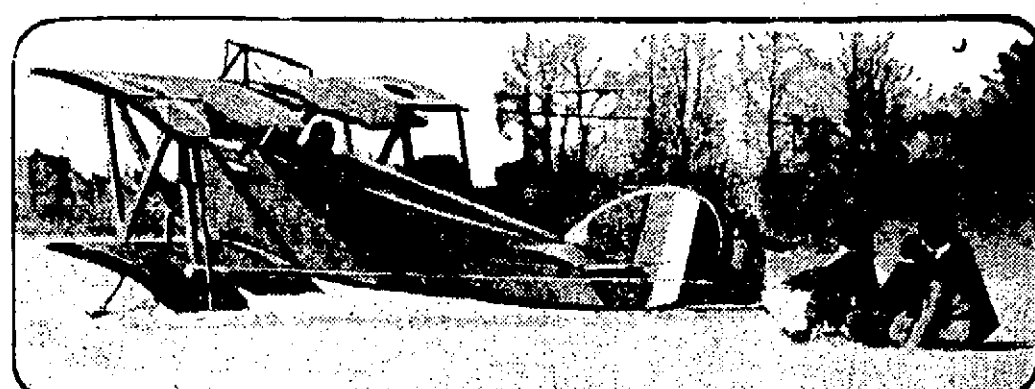

GENEVA, March 13.—(By the Associated Press)—News of a pathetic tragedy comes from Lindau, a small island in Lake Constance, where pretty Fraulien Mauser, 21 years old, shot herself yesterday before the church altar rather than wed a wealthy man twice her age.

When the priest asked the usual question whether she accepted the man as her husband, the bride replied: "No, no! I love another. My parents know this—I would rather die first!"

With these words she drew a small revolver from beneath her bridal bouquet and shot herself through the head, falling unconscious at the feet of the priest, and dying within a few moments.

GET RIGHT WITH GOD, EVANGELIST URGES AUDIENCE IN ALLEN CHAPEL

Allen Chaple was well filled last night when Dr. George Wood Anderson who has been delivering his powerful sermons against sin in the Gullin street Tabernacle, occupied the pulpit, where the colored church folk have been uniting in a revival. Dr. Anderson took the place of Rev. W. O. Harper of Youngstown who addressed a men's meeting for Dr. Anderson last week.

Last night the evangelist brought to his hearers another of his stirring messages in which he urged those who had not been following the straight and narrow path to get right with God by asking his forgiveness so that they could give the remainder of their lives to the upbuilding of God's kingdom.

Man, 77, Admits Making Whiskey; Is Fined $500

John Delong, 77 years old, arrested by county officers late Saturday in a raid on a shantyboat anchored in the Ohio river, at the mouth of Turkey Creek, pleaded guilty to a charge of manufacturing liquor unlawfully when brought before Squire George S. Morgan Tuesday. The aged man was fined $500 and costs by the magistrate and in default of payment he was remanded to the county jail. Delong claimed he was merely the caretaker of the boat on which the officers found and seized a large copper still and a thousand gallons of mash. The owners of the booze boat have not been apprehended. Delong is the oldest man in point of years to be prosecuted for violating the dry laws in Scioto county.

Good Friday Music At All Saints'

Those best qualified to judge are well aware of the fact that the Good Friday music at All Saints' church is always excellent. The atmosphere in which it is rendered, the fact that it is really a part of the worship of the church and the notable ability of the soloists and members of the chorus all combine to produce a result that cannot possibly be attained where these conditions are lacking. The music on Good Friday this year will be better than ever. The choir will sing "The Seven Last Words of Christ" by Theodore Dubois. Remember the date, March 30th; the time, 7:30 p. m., and the place, All Saints' church, and plan to be present without fail.

FIREMEN INSTALL RADIO OUTFIT

A complete radio outfit was installed at the Seventh street fire station Tuesday and soon the laddies will be entertaining their friends with concerts.

Funds to pay for the equipment were raised by popular subscription, several merchants making substantial donations which made the purchase of the outfit possible.

Gas Row Still On

CLEVELAND, O., March 13.—(By The Associated Press)—City council and the East Ohio Gas Company being deadlocked over the question of rates for gas in Cleveland, the next move to attempt to bring about a solution will be taken by Charles Hollman, acting chairman of an amalgamated association of civic clubs which will attempt to formulate a means of settlement at a meeting later today.

City council last night passed the Marshall 40 to 75 cent gas rate over Mayor Kohler's recent veto.

The company's standpoint is pressed by its president, M. B. Daly, that it is considering no more "except the issuance of a simple statement within a few days and the shutting off of the gas supply on May 1."

Hollman intimates that a compromise ordinance, which will be offered to the city council will be the aim of the representatives of the various civic bodies united to attempt a settlement of the deadlock.

DENIED RIGHT TO TALK UNTIL IT WAS HER TURN, NEGRESS GOES ON RAMPAGE IN COURT; POLICE CALM HER

The Municipal court was thrown into an uproar Tuesday afternoon by Ethel Brown, negress, when she appeared to answer to a disorderly conduct complaint filed by John Hampton, colored.

The woman grew hysterical because she was denied the right to talk before it came her turn to testify and she raised such a disturbance she was seized by officers and hustled out of the court room and over to the police station where she was finally quieted.

The woman was in court for a time yesterday to meet the charge but became tired of waiting and wandered away. She was located by officers in the North End after a search of several hours. Hampton claimed that she entered his store and threatened to kill him with an ice pick which she carried in her hand. She was given a hearing late this afternoon.

Fever Girl Tells Reasons For Fooling The Doctors And Public

ESCANABA, MICH., March 13.—(By the Associated Press)—Miss Evelyn Lyons, Escanaba "fever girl" whose methods raised the temperature of clinical thermometers to the limit for twenty-one days, sat up this morning and related to the Associated Press why she had "fooled" the hundreds who came to test her remarkable "temperature."

Evelyn was herself this morning, although still "very sick" and registered a fever of 101 degrees—this time correct.

"I did it for a joke at first and never thought of keeping it up, but when the time came to tell the truth, I just had to admit it," Miss Lyons explained today.

"Saturday night I knew collapse of the trick was near. I knew the doctors were only gauding me on when they said I was going to die."

knew Dr. Defnet was onto my scheme, and I tried to get out. Only I was so clumsy and they caught me. All I can say is that no one can hood wink the public and succeed. I am glad it's over, and I pray that I may get well—and I will."

According to a statement issued last evening by Dr. Harry J. Defnet, the girl has not wholly recovered from an automobile accident last fall which severely bruised her head.

"The girl is quite sick," declared the statement, "although she is suffering from a mental strain, which, coupled with a desire for publicity, explains her tactics."

The church was beautifully decorated for the occasion, the large center being especially attractive with its decorations of cut flowers, potted plants and myriads of large and small candles and electric bulbs. The choir also rendered impressive and inspiring music and served hundred people received communion at the early morning masses. The evening services were also largely attended and large crowds enjoyed the splendid sermon delivered by the Rev. Father.

THE MYSTERIOUS WAYS OF WANG FOO

FOURTH SERIES

By SIDNEY C. PARTRIDGE

Copyright, 1935, by The McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

"THE RED CLOUD ALLEY"

WANG FOO and his old friend the Abbot sat in the inner apartment of the little Temple of the Queen of Heaven. It was a quiet night and not much was stirring in that part of the island of Bragant Waters—that beautiful jewel of the Eastern seas, which the Englishman knows as Hong Kong.

"We are quite alone, Venerable Father?" asked the visitor.

"Absolutely so," was the reply, "even the sacred larks have tucked their heads beneath their wings."

"Then let us proceed. What is the latest news of the 'Tow-Tow-wui'?" (The 'Tow-Tow-wui' or 'Spotted Rabbit Society' being a secret organization that had caused the police of the island no little anxiety of late).

"You saw the yellow placards that were posted on the foreign streets last afternoon?"

"The fifteenth? That was Monday in the English calendar—yes, I have one here," producing a roll of paper from his sleeve and slowly unwrapping it.

"Well, what do you think of it? Who are they, and who is leading them on?"

"There is no doubt whatever that Wan-Pik (Crooked Nose) is at the head of it. You know he has vowed vengeance upon the foreign police ever since they caught his two brothers in the smuggler's raid, and sent them up to be punished at Canton."

"Yes, his name appears at the foot of every placard. But where does he hold out and how can we get our hands on him?"

"Ah, that's just the question. The native officers have searched the water-front resorts for him, but up to the present time with no success. They get just so far, but never any further. Whenever they find anyone who looks as if he might be one of the gang, they ask 'where is Crooked Nose?' and the only answer is, 'I don't know.' But the significant thing is that every time they hear the name, they startle and turn pale—showing that he must hold a rod of threat and terror over them."

"Quite so, quite so," repeated the Abbot slowly, nodding his head each time as he did so, "they must have heard or read the warning themselves or heard it talked over at the tea-shops. It doesn't necessarily mean that they have heard it from him directly. You feel quite certain that he is hiding somewhere in the Colony?"

"Oh, yes; they seldom go away from home, you know. They feel they are safer right here or across the ferry at Kow Loon."

"Has it gotten into the outside-kingdom-man's public announcer yet? (i.e. has it appeared in the English newspapers?)"

"Yes, but fortunately not so as to attract much notice. You see, Venerable Father, as I often tell my foreign friends when they regret they cannot read all they see on the streets, it's ignorance that works both ways. It detracts a great deal, of course, from the pleasure that might be theirs, but at the same time it saves them a great deal of irritation and annoyance. They would always be wanting to know what we say about them and always be misunderstanding it. It's like their ignorance of our local dialect—it saves us from all kinds of rows in the streets, because I am quite certain that the average white man would immediately want to strike and beat the coolie, if he ever understood the latter's remarks when his fare is underpaid."

The abbot smiled and quoted the ancient saying:

"Hales - yui - foo - pao - hloa - yiu - kwan!" (Learning has its blessings, ignorance has its rewards.)

Wang Foo continued, "No, I am glad to say that outside of Inspector Higgins and the Department, the residents in the Colony have given it very little attention. They have simply seen a few lines in the paper, to the effect that some native fanatic had posted up some threatening posters on the street and that the police had promptly removed them. The ordinary Britisher has such perfect confidence in the authorities over him that he just goes quietly along—pursues the even-temper of his way, as his poets say—and never worries about trouble until trouble comes."

"Even as it is written of our great Master Confucius, Along the circling path of life, he walked with perfect poise!" echoed the Venerable Father, as he paused for a moment and rose to replenish the incense smoking before the idol.

The morning after the above interview Wang Foo called at Police Headquarters and was promptly ushered into the Inspector's private office. "May I offer you one of these Manliars?" said Chief Higgins, who can guarantee their genuineness, for they've just come over from an old friend at Cavite."

"No, I thank you," courteously replied the visitor, "I hardly feel equal to a cigar this morning. If you will pardon me, I will just light one of these little Russian apocryphs (taking a faintly gold-tipped cigarette from his case)—you see I call them 'apocryphs' because there's hardly enough in them to really call them a smoke."

So they both sat down and chatted, and after the usual conventional remarks upon the weather and their individual health, they came to the subject of the placards of the 'Tow-Tow-wui' or 'Spotted Rabbit Society.'

"You see, it's about ten days now since these were posted up, and nothing particularly has happened since then," began the Inspector, "and were hoping that perhaps it will all blow over, and they will just let down and forget about it."

"None of your force reports any attack upon them, or anything special in the way of insolence from the coolies?"

"Nothing more than the usual amount of 'foreign devil,' which my men have by this time all gotten used to. By the way, Mr. Wang, what is the exact translation of that phrase that they applied to us?" pointing to the large Chinese characters at the head of a placard which lay unrolled upon the table.

"It really means the 'foreigners'—'bribees' or 'slaves'."

"And when this chap who calls himself the head of the gang—I believe you said it was 'Crooked Nose,' Supreme Lord of the Spotted Rabbit Society—did you not—when this chap calls upon all loyal natives to rise and exterminate the foreigners' hirelings, do you think he is referring to the English part of the Force, or the native?"

"Well," answered Wang Foo, "either, and thoughtfully, 'it may be either. The Chinese are very fond of ambiguous phrases, and love to use words with double meanings, so that they can hit in either direction, you see, like a wavering arrow that will strike either the right or left target."

"I guess he means to include us all."

"Perhaps he does—but we will wait and see. Something may turn up in a day or two, in which case you will let me know at once, please."

Something did turn up, but not in the way that either Wang Foo or the Inspector supposed!

Mrs. Hollingwood-Leroy's "at home" had become quite popular during her short residence in the Colony. In spite of the fact that she and her husband had only come to the East a little over a year ago, she had also in spite of the fact that it was whispered softly among the older inhabitants that newly found wealth in Penang tin mines had purchased and furnished their very elaborate home, yet No. 14 Duena Vista Road was the Mecca to a very large and representative company wended its way on the first and third Tuesdays of every month. Her remarkable gracious and hospitable manner made her guests forget the atmosphere of nouveau riche and they even overlooked her strenuous insistence on the hyphen in her name.

It was on one of these Tuesdays that the Rev. Alwyn Waters, B.D., second curate of St. Peter's Chapel, sat chatting with the Hollingwood-Leroys' most charming young American niece, Miss Martha Newcomb of Chicago.

"I beg your pardon," he began, though there wasn't really any reason why he should have begged it, for he had been most assiduously polite and attentive to her ever since she entered the house, "but I presume you have all been attending service at the Cathedral, haven't you?"

"Oh, yes," she replied, "all of us except Uncle, and he's not much of a church-goer, even when he's at home, you know. Auntie and I enjoyed the services so much—especially the music. We never expected to find such a well-trained choir out at this end of the earth."

"Oh, yes, the Cathedral's all right in its way, but you must do us the honor to come out to St. Peter's some day, even if it is a mile or two out of the way."

"And do you preach out there very often yourself, Mr. Waters?" she asked with a wicked little smile playing over her face, "I should just love to hear one of your sermons, you know."

"Oh, would you really?" said the blushing young curate, quite startled at the suddenness and delicacy of the compliment, "well I shall expect you all on Sunday next, for you see, this is the month I'm on duty in the pulpit, or 'in residence' as they say in London."

"And what is your text to be this time?"

"Well, I haven't quite decided on that yet; you see this is only Tuesday and I never choose my text until Friday."

"Friday? Why that is very bad luck, Mr. Waters, isn't it? Supposing it should happen to be the thirtieth of the month, that would be an awful combination, wouldn't it?"

"Quite so, but this Friday happens to be the fifteenth of the month, and is a very good luck, don't you know—besides, it happens to be my birthday!"

"Your birthday? Well, I wish you already many happy returns, and we must all be sure to come and hear the 'birthday sermon.'"

So on the following Sunday Mr. and Mrs. Hollingwood-Leroy and their niece found themselves comfortably seated in one of the front pews of St. Peter's-by-the-sea. Uncle having been literally dragged there by his devoted spouse.

The service, which was entirely conducted by the curate, passed off very acceptably to all concerned, though the attractions differed in each individual case. Uncle was pleased with the extraordinary comfort of the cushions in the pew and with the fact that a convenient curving on the pillar against which he leaned his head, enabled him to doze as gently as he would have in a barber's chair in Chicago. Auntie enjoyed the music of the boy-choir, and especially the little soprano, whose solo during the offertory she said was simply "divine" and more than repaid her for coming. Miss Martha alone of the three seemed to be at all interested in the sermon—it was simply because she alone knew that it was his birthday!

Was it because he blushed and stammered just a little when he saw the whole Hollingwood-Leroy family in the pew, or was it because he chose that beautiful text from Solomon's Song: "Many Waters Can Quench Love." Who knows? At any rate we will venture just so far as to assure ourselves that he hadn't waited until Friday to choose his text and begin his sermon, but had chosen it the very Tuesday evening after the tea with Miss Martha, had spent nearly five days of the most devoted labor upon it, and was perfectly satisfied outwardly—as his fair hearer was inwardly—that it was the very best one he had ever preached.

"We shall see you at Lady Becham's tennis to-morrow, shall we not?" asked the Aunt, as they paused to greet him in the Church porch at the close of the service.

"Delighted, I am sure!" he replied, with even a little more than his usual good cheer, as he assisted them into their sedans and bade them good-bye.

Down towards the lower end of Hong Kong's main thoroughfare, known since the very earliest days as Queen's Road, there is a sudden bend to the south where the long line of foreign stores changes almost imperceptibly into the rows and rows of native shops. Passing along the side-walk, just beyond where Europe, as it were, merges into Asia, the tourist will see a little brick arch-way opening into a narrow lane, which twists and climbs upward for a quarter of a mile until it joins the upper military road to the Peak. Over the top of the archway there are three large gilded Chinese characters, which tell the passer-by that it is the "Hung-Yuin-Loo" or "Red Cloud Alley," already made familiar to our readers as the residence of the Man of Mystery, Wang Foo, the Prince of Detectives.

About a third of the way up from the lower street, there is a modest native gate-way, closed and barred with the usual thick pine double doors and over it an old-fashioned English street-lamp, bearing the numbers 5-5-5 on one side and the corresponding Chinese symbols "Woo-woo-woo" on the other.

The night in question, which happened to be the very same Sunday as that on which Miss Newcomb had happened to the Reverend Mr. Waters' sermon, Old Chang, the gate-keeper, drew back the bolts from within the little court, and calling out to the Venerable Old One, "Choo-pao-yao-shi, ta-jin-hien-hui!" (I am going out on important business, I will return before the Master) passed out into the alley and disappeared down the hill.

He had hardly been lost in the crowd in Queen's Road, when Wang Foo unexpectedly returned, and paying off his dinner-ku, started to knock on the outer gate. As he did so, he noticed with surprise that a strip of written yellow paper had been pasted on the left hand gate-post. Without stopping to read it, he hastily tore it off, crumpled it up in his hand and tucked it away in his sleeve. "Where is Old Chang?" he asked of the ancient matron as she swung back the door and bowed to her Master. "Important business hath taken him away for a while," was the reply.

Wang Foo ascended the steep little stairs to the second floor, and calling to the Venerable Old One to pour the tea, he took off his ma-pou (horse-jacket or outer-coat) and lighting his student-lamp, placed it upon the table, and sat down to read the evening edition of the Daily News. He had hardly finished the first page, when crash! came a stone through his little glass window, just missing the lamp and landing on the floor by his chair!

Wang Foo started, and jumping to his feet, rushed to the window and threw it wide open. There was not a sign of any human being—the only living creatures visible to his searching eyes were two stray cats, hurrying away across the dividing wall. He came back to the table, extinguished the lamp and stepping softly back to the casement, stood there for several minutes and listened, but not a sound of anything like retreating foot-steps reached his ears. He closed it again, and once more lighting the lamp, began to pick up the pieces of broken glass. Having done this, he stooped to pick up the missile, which proved to be a piece of broken tile, having tied to it a strip of yellow paper. He cut the string with his scissors and laid the paper on the table. As he did so, his eye fell on the other paper which he had taken from the gate-post and which was dangling from the sleeve of his ma-pou.

"Well, Brownlow," remarked Inspector Higgins to his Deputy as the two officers returned to Headquarters from an interview with Sir Gilbert Moxley, the Crown Advocate, "I don't know about the time we heard from our finger of resentment toward him that they would express them in this peculiar way? He could understand, perhaps, that some critic of his might have posted the sentiment quoted on the gate-post—although the usual color for a good wish was red and not yellow—but who should it have been hurled at him through his window?"

The problem was certainly a new one to his western mind and he had better leave it to Wang Foo to work out, believing that the convolutions of his oriental brain will discover something in it that we are quite unable to see. As a matter of fact, he did make the discovery and he made it in less time than it takes for us to tell it. What was it? Was there anything peculiar about the piece of broken tile? No, it was just like a thousand other pieces that lie in the Chinese court-yards and streets. Was there anything suspicious about the string that it was tied with? No, it was just a piece of woven straw such as every coolie uses to bind on his sandals. Was there anything in the paper, or the writing on it, that would afford a clue? Absolutely nothing, as we heard it read: "Wang Foo will quickly be Wang Foo" that was all. Why should not the great Detective quickly and always be himself? Why should he not always be glad to be his best self? Perhaps he will let us into the secret later on!

"Well, Brownlow," remarked Inspector Higgins to his Deputy as the two officers returned to Headquarters from an interview with Sir Gilbert Moxley, the Crown Advocate, "I don't know about the time we heard from our finger of resentment toward him that they would express them in this peculiar way? He could understand, perhaps, that some critic of his might have posted the sentiment quoted on the gate-post—although the usual color for a good wish was red and not yellow—but who should it have been hurled at him through his window?"

look-see no have catches." "You tinker all finishes, eh? No more come this side?"

"My so fashion tinker." "What man you tinker come Hong Kong side do this plodgin?"

"My no save. Spouse Chinese man dinklee too muchee sam-shu, foreign police hittee chubee. He no takes you, Chief, you no fan savee. Nestee day Chinese man written plenty piece paper—you talkie all samee swear—puttee up dat wall side. Spouse two day more, he go forgettee. My tinker so fashion."

"All right, can do!" said the Inspector, and Number One returned to the native quarters.

"You hear what he thinks, Brownlow—and he is acting as the spokesman for the whole lot of them—it was just the work of some drunk that got into a brawl with some of our men, or perhaps the felks, on the street and relished their apologetic minds by cussing us on some posters the next day. He says, and I think he's right, that when they got sober a couple of days after, they just went off and forgot it."

"But what about this mysterious 'Spotted Rabbit' (or wild-hare, or skunk or musk-rat, or some other animal) Society with a chap named Crooked Nose at the head of it?" inquired the Deputy rather curiously.

"Oh, Number One doesn't seem to take any stock in that. He says it's just a blind which they use whenever they want to scare the foreigner. It seems, so Wang Foo told me the other day, that they got up such an anti-foreign society years ago when we used to go over and shoot rabbits on the Kow Loon fairs, and they keep up the name every now and then, though the society died out over thirty years ago."

"And how about Crooked Nose, who is supposed to be the brave and noble leader of his countrymen against the foreign devils, is he only a myth?"

"Well, Wang Foo wasn't positive about that, but I rather gathered from what he said that it might be a definite individual, or it might be just a popular term that any foreigner might use."

"What does old Dr. Williams up at the Mission Hospital think about the thing, anyway, he's about as good an authority as I know on all these native doings."

"Well, I had a chat with him a day or two ago, and he says that if it were up in the interior of the country somewhere, it might make us a little uneasy, but down here in the Colony, he don't think it amounts to anything. He thinks it's gotten up by some of the families of the smugglers who use this method of wreaking their vengeance on the police. Having once 'saved their face' before their friends and the public, they are satisfied and quickly forget it."

"I have heard so much from Mr. Waters about your lovely little Chinese home," said Miss Newcomb to Wang Foo as they met at Lady Becham's tennis, "that I am just crazy to see it. I hear you have a wonderful little study called the 'Glade of quiet reflection'—"

"Glade of quiet reflection," politely interrupted her Chinese guest.

"Oh, yes, how stupid of me, of course, it is 'reflection.' And what is it you call the little den of magic and mystery?"

"Why, I have given that a name from the ancient alchemists of my country. I call it the 'Grotto of mystic changes.' How does that strike your American ear? A little too poetic or fanciful, I fear?"

"No, not at all, just too fascinating for words. And when are we to have the honor of seeing it all, and having you explain all your treasures to us—Mr. Waters says your home is just full of them."

"It is for the lady always—not the gentleman—to name the happy day."

"That's just what I have been trying to get Miss Newcomb to acknowledge," broke in the Rev. Alwyn Waters, who had approached them, quietly from behind and was just leaning his arm on the young lady's chair.

"Why, Mr. Waters!" she exclaimed, "I'm surprised, I'm really afraid your sermon has gone to your head!"

"Indeed it has," he replied to the young lady's blushes, "but you see it has taken a rather roundabout journey, so to speak, it has gone to my head by the way of my heart! But we mustn't disappoint our good friend, Mr. Wang."

So it was arranged that on the following Tuesday Mrs. Hollingwood-Leroy and her niece Miss Newcomb, should accompany the Rev. Alwyn Waters to the famed residence of Wang Foo at No. 5-5-5 in the Red Cloud Alley.

"And we shall expect you to do some wonderful things for us that evening," she said, as she bade him good-bye.

"But I am not a professional magician," he protested, "just a very modest amateur, that is all, Miss Newcomb."

"Never mind, we have made up our minds to be charmed and mystified and we know we're not going to be disappointed. It's going to be the greatest night of all our visit, isn't it, Mr. Waters—oh almost, isn't it?"

"Most certainly so," answered the delighted Curate.

"And it most certainly was!" But although the Glade of Quiet Reflection was such an interesting place to visit, the accommodations were so limited that the number of guests could at no time be very large. That explains why, on our Tuesday evening in question, our genial host Wang Foo was only able to welcome into the Glade five visitors in all, viz: the two American ladies with the Curate and Inspe-to Higgins with his good Deputy, James Brownlow. Just why he should have selected the two heads of the Department of Police to meet the ladies disturbed the mind of Auntie—not a little, but she knew that her host was called by the Colony the Man of Mystery, and so she concluded that this was one of the little mysteries of the evening which would be cleared up later—and she was right.

Wang Foo did everything in his power to make the first part of the evening pass pleasantly for his guests. He told them to examine all the curiosities in the room while he played the role of Chinese scholar and interpreter, and made the hieroglyphic scrolls on the wall clear and beautiful in their meaning. The Venerable Old One had donned her best native robe for the occasion and passed the tea and refreshments with all the pomp and dignity of a server at the ancient Court of Nan-king. At last the little cuckoo clock above the mantle announced the hour of nine.

At last, now of the tiny Swiss bird died away, Wang Foo arose and stepping to the doors between the upper rooms, threw them open and turning to his visitors, said, with a most gracious bow of welcome, "Hwa - miao - tung - kwai - mein - wangi!" or, in the sweet tongue of the Anglo-Saxon, "The Grotto of Mystic Changes awaits the glance of your august countenance."

They had prepared their minds for something interesting, and they were not disappointed. They gazed at the optical instruments, the microscopes, etc., in the cases, they saw the shelves of different colored bottles and the retorts, and other chemical apparatus and listened to Wang Foo as he explained the analysis of native medicines, and the testing of animal and vegetable poisons and even the testing of various inks and paints of native make.

"And in all this just for pleasure and study, or do you use it detecting crimes?" asked Miss Newcomb. Wang Foo poured a colorless liquid over a piece of printed paper and she saw it turn first blue and then purple and then red and finally disappear altogether, and then turn slowly back to black as he breathed on it and warmed it in his hands.

"Everything here is dedicated to the sacred cause of truth, justice and humanity," proudly replied the great Detective, that is the meaning of the three golden characters you see upon the cross-beam above you:

"Cheng-tai-jin, or Truth, Justice and Humanity."

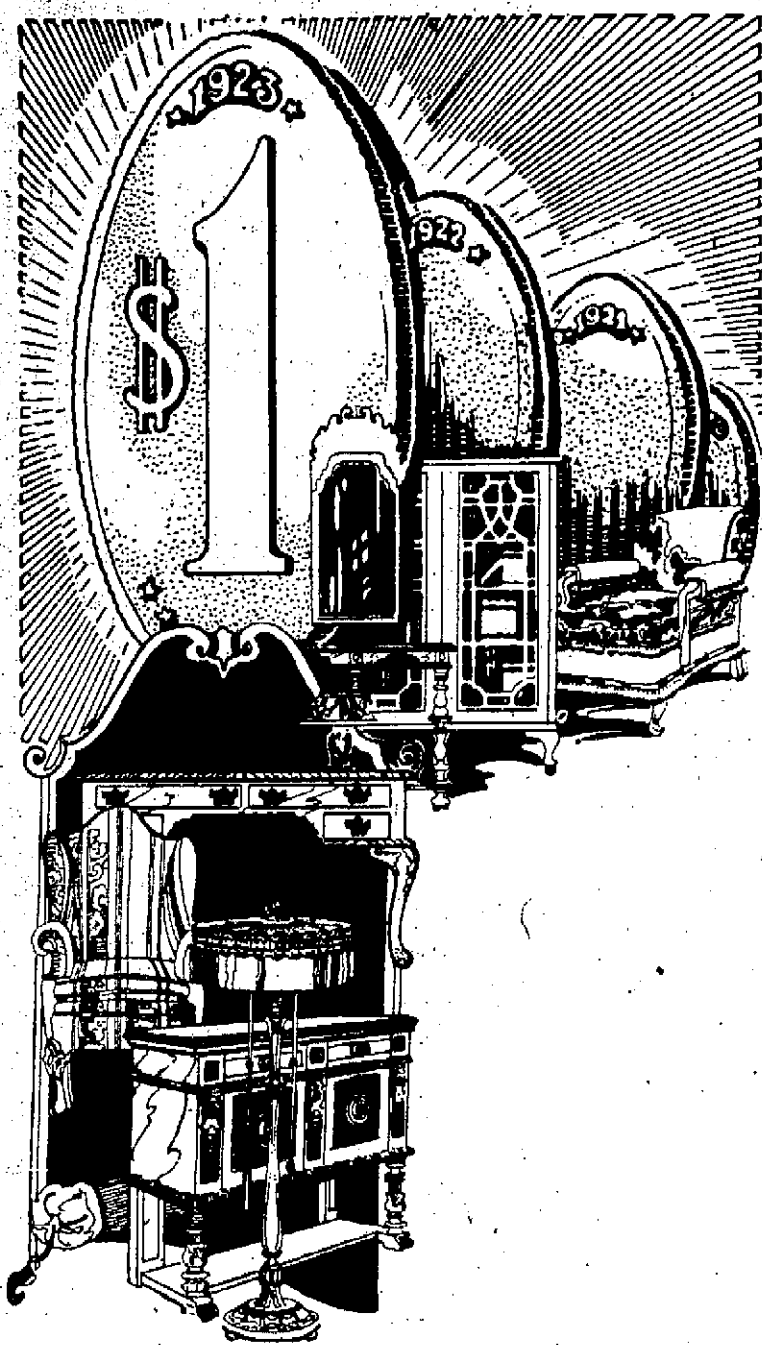

"And now, Ladies and Gentlemen, if you will kindly take your seats in the Glade of Quiet Reflection, somewhat after the manner of an audience in the theatre, I will stand here just inside of the door of the Grotto of Mystic Changes, and imagine myself as a performer on the stage. You see, as the magicians used to say when I was in Europe, I have no packs of cards or canary birds or rabbits up my sleeves, though I must acknowledge my sleeves are much more capacious than your. He perfectly still, please, and do not allow yourselves to be frightened by anything you see or hear."

"I have the honor this evening of presenting to you one of the most marvelous transformations that has ever taken place in this mystic Grotto. Please watch me very carefully! I hold in my right hand a small piece of written yellow paper (the lights all went out suddenly as he spoke, and the room was filled with a strange weird glow from a chemical wand, a shadow of him) and in my right hand a shawl of purple silk. I place the paper upon the shawl thus, and the paper turns into the man who wrote it, and—his face turned ashen pale under the glow—

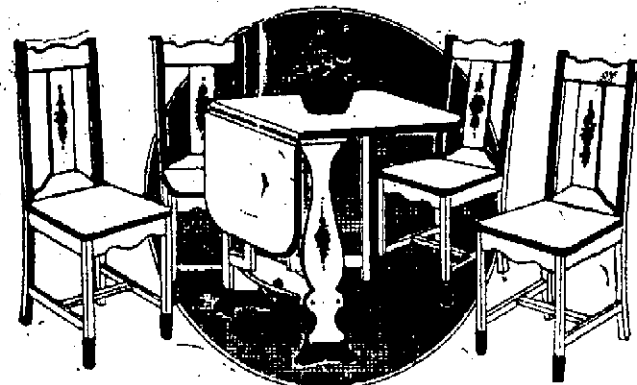

—who threatened me with Murder!" A shriek, a scream of terror, a struggle in the inky darkness that followed the explosion of the chemical bulb, and the voice of Wang Foo said calmly, "Mr. Inspector, will you please request the lady upon the table—I have a friend of yours here who thinks he would like to see you."

Jesse Johnson, Scioto Trail farmer, through a deal closed Tuesday, sold his property, situated east of Scioto Trail and north of the Boulevard road, to Fred Rohlfman of The Standard Supply Company. The tract contains eleven acres and the land will be platted into lots and placed on the market by the new owner.

Pupil Held For Fraud

CLEVELAND, O., March 13.—(By the Associated Press)—Mrs. Blanche C. Saltz, a pupil of Miss Harriet Mapes, principal of a Marion high school fifteen years ago, was held in $15,000 bond here today on the charge made by Miss Mapes that she had "shattered" her fortune of $25,000.

This money Miss Mapes declared was given to Mrs. Saltz to invest for her.

After the death of her parents in Marion a few years ago, Miss Mapes, upon the invitation of her former pupil, came to make her home with her here.

Dr. Louis Rodachek, 51, a friend and business associate of Mrs. Saltz, is also held under bond in the transaction.

Red Cross Aids Victims

CHICAGO, March 13.—(By the Associated Press)—Red Cross representatives, public officials and citizens committees were at work today retrieving the wreckage, human and otherwise, in the storm-swept states of the Mississippi and Ohio valleys. Reports, apparently nearly complete, place the life loss in the March fury of Sunday and early yesterday, at forty-four. Nearly 200 were reported injured.

The combination of blizzard blasts and the first general thunder storm of the year, left tragedy, damage, pathos and heroism in its wake.

Red Cross ministrations were being given today to the survivors at Pinson and Dennburg, in Western Tennessee, where 30 of the 300 or more inhabitants were killed and 100 persons were injured by the storm, which left little of these communities erect.

It was from this locality that Henry Kline, a youthful hero of Pinson, rushed for aid through darkness to Jackson, Tenn., ten miles away.

Landis Is Opposed To It

WORCESTER, MASS., March 13.—(By the Associated Press)—K. M. Landis, commissioner of baseball, is opposed to elimination of morning baseball games on Memorial Day.

In a letter to the Worcester Post of the American Legion which asked that he take action against such games, he says: "You may be sure that nothing in the world could possibly be more agreeable to me than to see the day completely given up by the whole population to Memorial observances, but from personal observation, and replies to inquiries, I have reached the conclusion, somewhat in opposition to my first blush impression, that to shut down on outdoor activities would really not tend to accomplish the end desired."

Mrs. J. S. Dunn of Kinney Lane, has returned from a delightful visit with relatives in Toledo and Cleveland.

Women—be Careful What You Use

Nowadays, every dainty woman carefully guards against offending thru offensive under-arm perspiration. But extreme care should be taken in employing commercial preparations which contain harsh ingredients of powerful chemicals as these are often injurious to the skin and clothing.

Dainty women have found that the best thing to use is Nul, a new discovery of a famous Chicago laboratory. Nul is absolutely pure and is guaranteed to be harmless to both skin and clothing. As a matter of fact, it leaves the most sensitive skin, soft, cool, smooth and white, no matter how often it is used.

It destroys every trace of perspiration moisture and odor and leaves the underarms sweet, clean and dry. It dries so quickly you can use it whenever you want to—on a moment's notice if necessary. No after treatments are necessary because Nul contains its own soothing cream and dainty tale.

You can get Nul at any drug store. It is very inexpensive and a few ounces will last for months. If you want to put an end to all perspiration troubles, be sure your druggist gives you Nul.—Advertisement.

Island Has Disappeared
PAPETE, TAHITI, February 29.—(By Mail to the Associated Press)—Easter Island, in the Pacific Ocean, 2,300 miles off the coast of Chile and famous for its ancient, gigantic statues believed to have been the work of a prehistoric people, has disappeared, according to the captain of a French merchant ship.

Although persistent rumors are rife here that the island sank during the Chilean earthquake a few months ago, no confirmation has been obtained.

The most circumstantial of the rumors received here is that of the French sea captain, who, seeking to verify his position, tried to sight Easter Island, but found nothing but water where the island should have been. It is pointed out by marine authorities, however, that observations of French merchant skippers are not always accurate.

FIRPO PUTS BRENNAN TO SLEEP IN TWELFTH ROUND

Is Now In Line To Meet Jack

NEW YORK, March 12.—Luis Angel Firpo, established today in the front rank of heavyweight title contenders. Last night he hurled the first obstacle in the path leading to a match with Jack Dempsey, the champion, when he knocked out Bill Brennan in the 12th round of a spectacular 15 round bout.

Bewildered by a steady flow of blood from a gash over his left eye and held at bay by Brennan's crafty defensive ability and ring generalship, the South American staged a furious comeback in the twelfth round to end the bout with dramatic suddenness. A series of sharp right uppercuts, none of which traveled more than six inches, but landed with smashing force, drove Brennan to cover and two sledge hammer thrusts to the head sprawled him on the canvas for the count of ten.

It was but the third time in his long and embattled career that the Chicago fighter has been knocked out. Both previous knockouts were administered by Dempsey, once in six rounds in 1918 and again in 12 rounds in 1920.

Surely Landis Has His Troubles

NEW YORK, March 12.—(United Press)—When Commissioner Landis took charge of major league baseball he must have known that pleasing the club owners was a job of the size and almost as impossible of fulfillment as drying up the ocean with the well known pun full of holes.

If the commissioner didn't know it then, he surely knows it now. Rather fortunately for him, however, he has only sixteen men to deal with and in that comparatively small group he can sort the ones for him and the ones against him.

The argument over the creation of the postoffice and the appointment of a man to the post should have shown the commissioner conclusively where he stood.

Since he took up the reins of baseball there has been a steady current of anti-Landis propaganda under the surface.

First it was suggested that he could not deal with the White Sox betrayal, and then it was suggested that he could not deal with the White Sox betrayal, and then it was suggested that he could not deal with the White Sox betrayal.

Jack Bentley, the $65,000 beauty the Giants secured from the Baltimore Orioles, is a first baseman, but he is more of a pitcher and McGraw hardly will take George Kelly off first base to use Bentley.

Since Lu Blue came up with the Detroit Tigers and developed into one of the best first basemen in the game, the crop of good initial success has been so poor that Doc Johnston held on for several years in fast company and the Doc was long overdue.

Comie Mack picked up Hauser, a youngster who fielded .364 and batted .300 last season, but Mack apparently isn't satisfied with him, as he said recently he would use Stuffy McInnis if he could get him.

The case of McInnis, by the way, is hard to figure. Three or four clubs could use him well, as regardless of slowed-up limbs he still has a couple of years of good baseball in him, but all the majors passed him when Cleveland asked for waivers.

In place of Stuffy, the Indians will try Brower, a young outfielder from the International League and Guisto, a big fellow who has been warning the bench.

Jim Bottomley, the Card first baseman, is the first good one to come up for several years in the National League and he isn't a sensation. The Reds are going along with Jake Daubert, one of the oldest players in the league who insists, however, upon acting like one of the youngest.

Brooklyn is so badly in need of a good guardian at the initial corner that Squire Ebbets grabbed onto Jack Pomeroy when the Cards decided to get rid of him.

Next it was the rescue of baseball after it got dark that afternoon during the world's series.

Now it is the Benton case. The commissioner has in his lap a case that the National League wasn't courageous enough to settle itself. If Babe Benton is to sue anyone, he must institute proceedings against Landis. The National League is out of it.

The Benton case is the toughest proposition that has been put up to the commissioner and some of the managers are reminding him, in actions, if not in actual words, that such are the things for which he was hired.

If Landis reinstates Benton he will have Charley Herzog and his lawyers on him; if he puts the skids under Benton, he will have Garry Herrmann, the St. Paul club and Benton around his neck.

The National League passed the buck to Landis because it doesn't want to air the Herzog-Benton case in court. If legal action results from the present tangle, the records may have to be produced, if they haven't been destroyed.

Selects, Minus Regulars, Lost To Mt. Hope

The Baesman Selects are meeting some worthy foes in their several days' trip through West Virginia. Last night they met the famous quintet representing the Y. M. C. A. at Mt. Hope, W. Va., and that five took the measure of the Selects, 33 to 20.

The Selects are missing Edwards, Kent and Brown, three regulars, who could not make the long trip. The Baesman crew has been out-shot in their two contests so far on the trip. They have two more games to play before hitting the road for home.

Last night's lineup and summary: Portsmouth—20. Mount Hope—33. Dell—1. R. F. Milliron 2; Trotter 9; Baesman—C. Dwar 4; Kirk 1.

Foul goals—Dell 2; Milliron 1.

Lynch Afraid For Title, Says Farrell

BY HENRY L. FARRELL
(United Press Sports Editor)
NEW YORK, March 13.—(United Press)—Joe Lynch hasn't done much since he won the bantamweight championship the second time, with the exception of losing nearly all the friends and followers he ever had. Joe apparently is of the idea that the crown was entrusted to him to be kept in good hands and that he has the only good hands in the division. He has even gone so far in picking setups that he will not fight even a first class setup and has descended to the place where his victims are picked almost from the amateur ranks.

In following the habit of holding the title at all costs, Lynch should remember that he never would have won the title if Johnny Buff had been unwilling to take a chance.

Buff did more than take a chance. He fought Lynch when he was in such physical condition that he didn't have one chance in a hundred to win but he was game enough to defend his title against a first class opponent.

Lynch is not in the position of Jack Dempsey, who hasn't any real outstanding rivals, because Carl Tremaine and Joe Burman are camping on his trail and neither one of them is capable of giving him everything he wants.

Burman may have to cut an arm off to make the weight, but Lynch is getting close to the junior featherweight class. Tremaine can make the weight easily.

Lynch's dangers are not confined to the bantamweight class. Pancho Villa, the little American flyweight champion, would give Lynch an awful fight if the New York Irishman would give him a chance. Pound for pound, little Villa is the best fighting machine in the United States and that goes for Dempsey.

Grouchy Ned's found recently in a medical examination that he had been outfighting in the National League for eleven years with only one eye. His case is not so remarkable as some other players have been pasting longer than that without a head.

IRONTON MAY GET COUNTRY CLUB

The Irontonian says:
"A number of Ironton's prominent business and professional men are looking over a number of different sites in the country for a new golf course, as the present one is in the flat recently purchased by Kennedy and Wietek in the south side.

While nothing definite has yet been decided upon it is more than likely, when a suitable site is found, a country club house will also be built. It is the intention to organize with a capital stock of from $50,000 to $100,000.

A country club is something that has long been anticipated by some of the city's most prominent men and those who are interesting themselves will have no trouble in organizing with a good membership. Ashland, Huntington, Portsmouth, Chillicothe and several other cities along the valley have country clubs and there is no reason why Ironton shouldn't have one.

Twice A Failure In American League
Pinelli Now Rated Star In National

Baseball produces many unusual situations.

The case of Babe Pinelli, star third sacker of the Cincinnati Reds, is a good example.

Just a present third base is a debatable spot in the Detroit infield. Bobby Jones and Fred Haney will fight it out for the regular berth.

A few years ago Pinelli was a member of the Detroit squad. He was tried out at third at various times and finally sent back to the minors as a third sacker big league class. In justice to Pinelli, however, it should be stated that he didn't get the opportunity his ability deserved. The moment he slumped in his work he was benched.

Last fall the Chicago club paid something like $100,000 for Willie Kamm to the San Francisco club of the Coast League. Kamm is expected to star at third base for the Chicago White Sox.

Prior to getting a chance with Detroit, Pinelli was tried out by the White Sox. As at Detroit he never received a very thorough trial.

After being twice passed to the minors by American League clubs, Pinelli is resurrected for the third time as a big league possibility and makes good at Cincinnati.

When it is remembered that Pinelli succeeded Heinie Groh at Cincinnati, rated one of the best third sacker in the business, his hoy to fame is all the more praiseworthy.

Pinelli, twice a failure in the American League, in one year wins a place in stardom as a National leaguer.

All of which merely proves that you can never tell in baseball.

"THAT MILLION DOLLAR PAYROLL AND THE HOUSING CORPORATION"

THE pay roll of the new wire and rod mill will run over $1,000,000 per year, according to a conservative estimate, and this will mean that this great sum will be spent right here in Portsmouth.

That sentence struck us most forcibly when we read it in a special article in the Sunday Sun and Times, dealing with the new mill that is just about to be put into active operation by the Whitaker-Glessner Company. Just think what that million dollars dumped into the local channels of trade will mean. It means more business for the department stores, for the meat dealers, for the haberdashers, for the shoe merchants, for the furniture dealers, in short, it means added business for every retailer in the city of Portsmouth. And this beneficial stimulus to business will reach outside the confines of the city. It will mean a better market for every farmer who brings his produce to Portsmouth. It will go further than that. In gradually diminishing circles it, with hundreds of other payrolls all over the country, will help to stimulate the automobile industry, the piano industry, the phonograph business, etc. And all will be a part of the mighty volume of payrolls that is ushering in an era of the greatest prosperity for the United States.

With such a vision before us we can not see how Portsmouth will fail to do her part in raising the hundred thousand dollars with which to build houses for the workmen who will come here to operate this new mill, to earn, receive and spend this million dollars. Were the proposition put up to Portsmouth to give a bonus of $100,000 to secure such an industry we believe the sentiment would be virtually unanimous for raising it, on the single plea of good business for the city. We believe such a sum would be raised. And here is a plant placed at our doors, ready to operate. It was brought here on the promise of the representatives of the city of Portsmouth that this city would raise $100,000—not as a bonus, but to be invested in houses which are to be rented to the workers in the new mill. The plan as worked out gives every indication of assuring a fair return upon the money invested.

Under such conditions we believe every citizen of Portsmouth who is engaged in business here, or who owns property, should do his or her share toward building these houses. Think it over!

THE AERIAL LIMITED

If it were not for the names of the directors, including some of the most substantial and hard-headed men of business in the country, the latest scheme for a trans-continental air service by dirigibles would be received with a good deal of skepticism by the general public. Accommodations resembling those of an ocean steamship—rows of staterooms, a spacious dining saloon, an observation lounge, a glass-enclosed promenade deck—these are some of the features mentioned.

San Francisco is to be brought within 51 hours of New York. At first there will be a ten-hour service to Chicago. The cost to the passenger is to be about the same as by the present limited trains. As proof of the possibility of maintaining a regular service of dirigibles, the success of the Zeppelins in Germany before the war is maintained. It is true that several of those big airships met with disaster, but it is pointed out that 35,000 passengers were carried a distance of 110,000 miles without the slightest accident. It is recorded, however, that on one occasion it was found necessary to moor a dirigible for three days in an open field owing to the prevalence of a 75-mile-an-hour gale.

It is announced that unless the directors are able to satisfy themselves that the service can be maintained with absolute safety to passengers under all conditions they will abandon the project. Safety is the first consideration.

New York-Day-By-Day

BY O. O. MCINTIRE

NEW YORK, March 12.—There is a wretched sort of poverty hiding in many of the old tenement dwellings in the West Twenties. Cooped up in hall rooms and attics are occupied by young girls who have come to make their way in the arts.

Mostly they are dancers and amateur clay modelers whose output goes to the souvenir and curio shops in Washington Square. All hope some day to write their names big on the scroll of Fame. Many who toiled before them have.

Just a few years ago a starving, penniless immigrant went forth from a staid studio to Rome with the Tiffany prize to pursue his art studies in plenty. There are numerous other instances where Fate has suddenly snatched genius from the shabby obscurity down there.

These patient young girls are literally living on crusts. I visited the studio of one—up five flights, ring O'Brien's bell—the other day. Here, under a spluttering candle, she was painting flowers on tin ash trays which she would the next day hawk at the doors of theatre dressing rooms.

She was once of the chorus and was slated for the leading part in a play that has been running two years. But the producer became too much interested in her and before the final rehearsals another vivacious young creature took her place.

She learned that the path to theatrical success has dangerous pitfalls and so she turned to her early love for painting. She lives and works in an abandoned little cubby hole determined that some day she will paint the deathless canvas.

Her breakfast and only meal of the day was a bottle of milk and a cruller. I have mentioned her because she is typical of hundreds of courageous young souls who are battling for a high place in the world under most disheartening conditions.

An Affirmative Negative

The irate customer shook his portrait in that photographer's face.

"Do I look like this picture?" The thing's an outrage. "Why, you're giving me an awful squint and the look of a prize fighter. Now, answer me, and no nonsense about it. Do you call that a good likeness?"

The photographer scanned the print then looked at the customer.

"The answer," he said, "is in the negative."—The Christian Advocate.

Oswald Garrison Villard said in an address at Cooper Union.

"As the authoritative war books begin to appear we grow more and more uneasy before the war frauds which they unveil.

"Gower came home one evening in 1917 more than jubilant.

"Hurrah," he shouted, "I did grand piece of war work today."

"Yes, what was it?" said his wife beaming.
